SAVAGE HOME, BROKE AND HUNGRY

Seattle, Wash., Dec. 26.—Robert Savage, the rollicking, frolicking, apathetic "Bob" of Yale, who handed ushers fifty dollar tips and was host at some of the most lavish parties the Rialto had ever known, has come back to civilization.

He has been away for months in Alaska disillusioning himself overcoming the infatuation that resulted in his sensational marriage last March with Geneva Mitchell, the midnight frolic "Pogo girl."

He has come back from the Northern lights to which he fled to get away from the electric lights. And he has found himself spurned not only by his kin and stripped, he believes, of many of the friendships he clung in brighter and wealthier days.

Bob Savage, whose wining and dining days cost him $30,000 in a short period, is broke.

For twenty-four hours after his return from the Alaskan wilds he went without food.

Three months of reflection in "the great open spaces" have taught him serious philosophy of life, of which

Drunks Will See How They Looked When "Overseas"

Des Moines, Iowa, Dec. 26.—John B. Hammond, chief of police, announced today that every drunken man who is brought into police headquarters hereafter will have his picture taken.

When the offender has become sober again he will be presented with a picture of himself, so that he may know just how he looked when he was brought to the jail. Hammond hopes this "picture cure" will be a potent weapon against drunkenness.

112 IN ROXBURY COURT ON DRUNK CHARGES

One hundred and twelve men were arraigned in Roxbury court today on drunkenness charges. This comes close to establishing a record, even for pre-Volstead days, according to court officials. The arrests included those from the Dudley street, Roxbury Crossing and part of the Back Bay district, and consisted of holiday celebrants who fell into the hands of the law from Saturday noon to this morning.

COURT NULLIFIES HOTEL PLAZA SALE

Because a bankruptcy sale conducted at the Hotel Plaza, Columbus avenue, last week, did not bring in the figure desired, a court order nullified the sale. Those who purchased articles were reimbursed today. The hotel will open, as soon as pending renovations are completed, under the management of John F. Sullivan, former proprietor of the Hotel Oxford.

QUINCY VICTIMS PLAN RAIL PROTEST

A mass meeting of indignant Quincy commuters of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad is to be called soon to take formal action on the inefficient train service.

The committee of Quincy Chamber of Commerce, of which Vice-President J. Winthrop Pratt is chairman, appointed to make a start in this matter, meets this week to make plans for calling a mass meeting.

Quincy has 15,000 commuters on the New Haven. Innumerable complaints, chiefly about late trains, are heard. The City Council has al-

FIRST GOLD SKATES RACE TRIALS JANUARY 20

By CHARLES E. PARKER.

The GOLD SKATES races are coming. January 20 has been tentatively set for the first preliminaries, with the second series one week later, weather permitting.

Then follow the grand finals, in which eight pairs of GOLD SKATES, with SKATING BOOTS, will be awarded the eight title winners, and eight pairs of SILVER SKATES, with SKATING BOOTS, will be presented to those who finish second in each of the eight classes.

But perhaps you have been too busy Christmas-ing to have learned of the plan to conduct a great ice skating derby—Greater Boston's First Annual Ice Skating Derby.

The original announcement was made in the columns of this paper late last week. If you missed it in your rush to purchase presents or in your station at receiving some much-to-be-desired gift you will want to read this article from this point on to the last period.

Every boy and girl, and every young man and woman in this section who owns a pair of skates and knows how to use them, and every mother and father in Boston and vicinity who is interested in undertakings which benefit the health of such boys and girls, should be vitally concerned.

Greater Boston's First Annual Ice Skating Derby, the GOLD SKATES races—has as its aim the promoting

3 DEAD, 50 ILL FROM LIQUOR

Trail of Holiday Moonshine Leaves Fearful Toll in Greater Boston

Three persons who tried to see a Merry Christmas through moonshine are dead in Greater Boston.

Fifty more will usher in in the bright New Year reclining on hospital cots.

All because it was a wet Christmas. And the post-Volstead dampness comes under the heading of dangerous moisture.

THE DEAD.

Veronica Tomashomas, 30 years old, of No. 146 Willows street, East Cambridge.

William Brady, 48, of No. 188 Harrison avenue, South End.

O'Malley was found with a fractured skull, suffering from alcoholism. It is thought he fell down a flight of stairs while intoxicated. He died a short time after his removal to the City Hospital.

The Tomashomas woman was found dead in her home. Although her face bore marks of violence, police believe her injuries were received in falls during a drinking bout which lasted throughout the greater part of yesterday. Brady was removed in an unconscious condition from his home and succumbed a few hours later at the hospital.

The police believe that local moonshine is responsible for the large

JUDGE FIRES 2 BAIL COMMISSIONERS

Judge Frederick W. Fosdick of the Judicial Committee of the Superior Court today dismissed Bartholomew F. Costello and Abraham Winick as bail commissioners.

The dismissal followed reports to the committee that the men employed improper methods for the solicitation of bail.

BECKER TO DIE IN CHAIR IN FEBRUARY

New York, Dec. 26.—Abraham Becker, chauffeur, today was sentenced to die in the electric chair at Sing Sing for the murder, last April, of his wife, Jennie, whose body was found several weeks ago in a lime-filled grave in the Bronx.

Judge Gibbs decreed that Becker should be executed during the week of February 5.

HEAR THOMPSON WILL ENTER CABINET

New York, Dec. 26.—A Washington special dispatch to the Globe today said: "Attorney-General Daugherty has decided to retire, but an announcement can hardly be expected before March 1. His close friends said today Carmi Thompson, the defeated Republican candidate for a Governor of Ohio, would be Daugherty's successor."

BOYS' BOOTLEGGERS SOUGHT IN LYNN

Lynn police are striving to apprehend bootleggers guilty of furnishing "third rail" liquor to minors.

The arrest of more than a dozen youths under seventeen and a seventeen-year-old whiskey peddler has alarmd the authorities.

Some of the boys arrested were violently ill.

Backing up information believed to have come from one of the young drinkers, officers caught Charles Stavropoulos of No. 75 Pleasant street, Lynn, while making a delivery at a Richmond place house.

He was fined $50

PRISONER FLEES CAMBRIDGE JAIL

Police Station 2 of East Cambridge had its Christmas surprise today. It was the escape of John Langston, colored, of West Rutland street, Back Bay, from Cell 9, between 6:30 Christmas Eve and 8:30 Christmas morning, but not reported owing to a belief that he had been bailed.

The escape was revealed when he failed to appear in Cambridge court today on charges of trying to smuggle "dope" to a friend in the jail.

It was revealed also that his cell door was open, that the lock was not broken and that evidently it had been picked. One theory is that, once in the open cell room, John went through an unlocked door into the wagon house and out an unbarred window to the street.

TRAIN SERVICE WILL BE WORSE

New York, Dec. 26 (By International News Service).—Railroad traffic in the United States is near the level of high record and congestion has created a serious situation, according to Samuel Rea, president of the Pennsylvania railroad system.

"The railroads of the country, at the close of an eventful year, face an array of unusual, and, in some respects, unprecedented difficulties," he said.

"Since the latter part of 1921 there has been a reversal of business conditions in America and with all the hard knocks it is a change for the better. From extreme dullness we have rapidly advanced to a point where railroad traffic is close to record levels.

"To handle that rush of traffic is more difficult now than during the war, when individual conveniences and advantages were patriotically sacrificed."

U. S. ACTS ON BOOZE BANQUET

Three Men Summoned to Testify Before Commissioner Hayes

First Federal action in connection with the recent booze scandal at the Hotel Somerset is scheduled to take place tomorrow.

Three men are to appear before United States Commissioner Hayes.

This announcement was made today by United States District-Attorney Robert O. Harris. He refused to say whether the men were defendants or merely witnesses to give information upon which warrants could be obtained.

The prohibition forces have turned over to Mr. Harris evidence in the case, which had to do with a banquet of the New England Rail Builders' Association, during which nursing bottles filled with whiskey were distributed to the guests.

PLAYFUL KITTEN CAUSE OF DEATH

New York, Dec. 26.—A kitten playfully today sprang at the rubber feed hose connected to the gas stove in the Brooklyn home of Mrs. Catherine Carey.

Later Mrs. Carey and the kitten were found asphyxiated. Three neighbors — Mrs. Lillian Martinelli and her two children, Joseph and Mary—were rendered unconscious but were resuscitated.

WARNED BY JUDGE FOSDICK

Entire Panel Is Cautioned Against Persons Seeking to Influence Returns

The Joseph C. Pelletier and Daniel H. Coakley cases will be among the first considered by Attorney-General Allen's new pecial Grand Jury, which holds its first session today.

This was indicated by the presence in the lobby of the Superior Criminal Court, among assembled witnesses, of Meyer Berman and Captain James F. McDevitt.

During the proceedings to oust Joseph C. Pelletier as district attorney, Berman was one of the principal witnesses. He testified he had paid $50,000 to avoid persecution.

The case involved an alleged attempt to blackmail Berman because of the tenancy in his hotel on Court street—the Higgins House—of a prominent Bostonian and a woman to whom the latter was not married.

Captain McDevitt, then a lieutenant attached to Mr. Allen's staff, was assigned to get the register at Berman's hotel and to do other work on the case.

Martin J. McGuire, foreman, of No. 2 Brunswick street, Ashmont, was elected foreman of the special Grand Jury, and James A. Alcardi, salesman, of No. 19 Maryland street, clerk.

Judge Frederick W. Fosdick today instructed the Grand Jury.

He told the jurors they were not to consider the fact that a defendant was many miles away as a cause to delay action. This was taken as a reference to Pelletier, who is in Europe.

Judge Fosdick emphasized that in many respects this Grand Jury was

SHIPWRECKED CREW BROUGHT TO PORT

New York, Dec. 26.—The captain and crew of the two-masted schooner Gordon Fudge of St. Johns, N. F., came into port today on the British freighter Menominee, whose crew rescued them during a violent storm five days ago 1,000 miles off the American coast. Captain E. O. Fudge, skipper and owner of the schooner, said he had been fighting the storm for 14 days.

GERMANY APPEALING TO UNITED STATES

Berlin, Dec. 26.—Germany is appealing directly to the United States to act as an intermediary between Germany and France. The German proposal, which has been made through regulation diplomatic channels, calls for the creation of a four-power pact, which would not include the United States. Germany wishes to safeguard her western frontier. The suggested treaty would prevent further military encroachments upon German soil.

NEW ARMOUR CO. OF 160 MILLIONS

Chicago, Dec. 26.—Attorneys here are drawing up the details for application in Delaware for a charter for a new $160,000,000 Armour & Company corporation, termed a subsidiary of the present Armour & Company, and which it was believed here today was one of the preliminary steps to the purchase and absorption of Morris & Co.

Auditors are understood to have been at work in the offices of both companies to obtain final figures of the physical property involved.

YOUTH GRILLED IN WILLIS MURDER

Francis L. Logan, twenty-three, of Main street, Medford, was questioned today by the police of City Hall avenue station in connection with the killing of George A. Willis, superintendent of messengers of the Boston News Bureau.

Six other youths, picked up over the week-end, in the police dragnet were released after they had been examined in a line-up at City Prison and were not identified.

Logan was arrested on a drunkenness charge near Dudley street terminal, Roxbury. He fought, and during the scrap kicked Patrolman Quinn of West Roxbury station in the head.

The police say Logan admitted knowing that he was being sought.

ROBBED IN FRONT OF FITCHBURG JAIL

Fitchburg, Dec. 26.—E. L. Hennault, a thirteen-year-old boy, was held up, searched and cast into a snowbank directly in front of the County Jail here by a large and desperate thief for whom the police are searching. The man is described as tall and well built.

ISADORA ROWS WITH PIANIST ON STAGE

New York, Dec. 26. — Isadora Duncan appeared at the Academy of Music, Brooklyn, with Max Rabinowitz, pianist, and after dancing four numbers before a crowded house, in the most diaphanous of draperies, her accompanist refused to appear further and the curtain was rung down and the audience dismissed.

Miss Duncan made a remark to the audience in an undertone that apparently displeased Rabinowitz, for he refused to reappear and she danced part of her last number without music. Her second number, "A Radio to Bernhardt" was danced, according to her announcement, as "A Funeral March to a Great Artist."

Her husband, the young Russian poet, ran about the house after the curtain was rung down, excitedly seeking the dancer. It was said she was indisposed and a victim of "Temperament" for the evening.

B. & M. WOODEN CARS SCORED

ready adopted resolutions condemning the railroad and asking Mayor Bradford to ask that conditions be remedied.

The night express from New York to Boston via the Shore Line of the New Haven road, ran in four sections today and every section was from one and one-half hours to two hours late.

The express, made up of coaches, stateroom cars and sleepers, leaves Grand Central Station, New York, at midnight, and is due at South Station, Boston, at 7 a. m.

The first section arrived 1 hour and 33 minutes late today, ditto the second section the same. The third and fourth sections were 2 hours and 3 minutes late each.

The Federal Express from Washington came in two sections. The first was 1 hour and 5 minutes late; the second was 1 hour and 37 minutes late.

The 6:45 a. m. train from Cohasset today, due at Braintree at 7:17, arrived at Braintree at 8:02 and stayed there. Passengers debarked, waited for the next train to Boston and were delayed at Quincy by a broken coupling.

The train finally arived at the South Station at 8:45. Passengers on the original 6:45 from Cohasset were due at the South Station at 7:44, so they were one hour and one minute late.

"SPECIAL" EXPRESS.

Wollaston and Quincy commuters were wrathful today at being misled to a "special extra" train which made them later than they would have been had they stayed where they were on the regular train.

These commuters were parked at the headgate in the South Station Christmas night for the 11:09 for Wollaston and Quincy. The gate was opened at 11:15. Just as passengers started to get aboard a trainman called out: "Express for Wollaston and Quincy on next track."

That sounded promising; take an express and beat the other train. The commuter relating this incident continued his grievance thus:

"When I got aboard the express (?) I asked another trainman to make sure. He replied cheerfully: 'Oh, yes, this express is a Christmas special extra. It leaves one minute ahead of the regular 11:09.'

KIDDED OUT OF IT.

"So I waited with the others. But I'll be hanged if the other train, which we had started to board and had been kidded away from, didn't start before we did. It pulled out at 11:30, while our 'Special Christmas extra' stuck right there till 12:05. It was late, as I was told, to get away at 11:08—a minute ahead of the regular.

"Instead, it started thirty-five minutes behind the regular. Excuse me from 'special extras' of the New Haven road, Christmas or any other time."

Lack of tools, inefficient organization of the working gangs, incompetent foremen and wretched conditions generally are the handicaps in making up trains at two of the principal yards of the New Haven, 4 and 5, South Boston, according to members of the workers' force there. These are the causes of many of the delays and many of the accidents that have handicapped the New Haven service for so long, they say.

In many cases mere boys are placed in charge of repair work that requires the experience of older men. One lad, only sixteen, has charge of four cracks, twenty or thirty coaches on each track. It is his duty to connect and disconnect them, as well as look after the hose that transmits the heat from the engine.

MYSTERIOUS HELP.

The dilapidated condition of the hose is blamed for the lack of heat in the coaches. In years gone by it was customary throughout to overhaul the hose every Summer. Some of them haven't been inspected for many months, they state.

There is, according to the workmen, a dearth of new parts with which to repair the damaged brakes. Oftentimes a badly worn part is substituted for a broken part, thus endangering the lives of hundreds of passengers.

It is further stated that the working force is a hodgepodge of men and women, white and blacks, young and old, who report to work at various hours in the morning, disappear into the maze of cars in the Dover street yards and, at quitting time, reappear to clock out; there is no adequate system to account for them, nobody knows what they have done all day and nobody seems to care.

Complaints against the poor services on the New Haven road and likewise the Boston & Maine continue to pour into the Boston American, and a few of the letters sent into this office are published as follows:

FLAYS B. & M. CLAIMS.

"I hope you will devote space to better service on the Boston & Maine. At present it is the worst ever known — delays, breakdowns, dirty, cold cars are daily occurrence. A few weeks ago the general manager of the B. & M. gave out a statement that the service was normal, there being no delays to passenger trains, and that the public was perfectly satisfied. If there could have been reporters on several different trains I have ridden on in the past month, I would have liked to have seen the 'satisfaction' he lays claim to appear in print. The 3 p. m. train out of Boston for White River Junction recently was three hours and forty-five minutes late.

"C. H. HARMON.

"Laconia, N. H."

"Editor American:

"Agreed—the service on the New Haven is rotten and will be more so unless the public insists on the officials running the railroad as they should, instead of listening to the advice of Wall Street on how to break up an organization.

"C. K.

"Clarendon Hill."

WALPOLE SUFFERS.

"Editor American:

"I hope your efforts will succeed in arousing the Public Service Commission to determine why New England and her industries must suffer the service that is now afforded by the New Haven Railroad. The 6:05 p. m. train from Walpole to Boston is honestly a joke. It left Walpole one week thus: Monday at 6:15, Tuesday at 7:15, Wednesday at 7:10 and Thursday at 7:40. Is it surprising that commuters, who travel on monthly books and who must pay for service, whether they get it or not, are complaining at the inconvenience of having to put up with the number of delays that have passed the exception stage and are now the rule? W. D. CROWELL.

"Walpole."

HITS CONNECTICUT.

"Editor American:

"In Connecticut things are terrible.

"Patrons of the New Haven road are using the calendar instead of the railroad time table. December 15, a friend and myself arrived at Stamford one and one-half hours late. At that we were told we were fortunate as the whole west end of the electric system was tied up for more than three hours immediately after we arrived. From Hartford to New Haven, December 16, the train due to leave at 10:15 arrived in New Haven thirty-six miles at 1:15 in the morning. Industry is at a standstill in consequence of the service. There is no coal to be had. If it keeps up the people of Connecticut will have to go through a Winter that will be a disgrace to civilization.

"JAMES HAYES.

"New Haven."

RAPS WOODEN CARS.

"Editor American:

"While you are at it, why don't you give the B. & M. a thumping, as the New Haven has nothing on the B. & M., in fact, am of the opinion that the New Haven is safer to travel on than the B. & M., as the New Haven has some steel passenger equipment but the B. & M. has very little. About all the B. & M. cars are old wooden, worn out equipment, and some of it was brought over by Noah on his first trip, so I am told. The B. & M. trains are running very late, cars are in a filthy condition, many without heat. Wednesday, the 20th, arrived at Boston on a train from Manchester over three hours late, several of the cars with no heat whatever. J. M. MARCHAND.

"Manchester, N. H."

Editor American:

"I have been obliged to travel often on the New Haven system in the past six months. I never saw such filthy, miserable cars on any road. It is useless to refer to the time-table. It seems like a joke. Leave on time? No. Hardly ever. Left Boston Monday night on the 10:45 train for Providence and arrived in Providence at 12:52, one hour and four minutes late.

the most important body of its kind ever impaneled in Boston, and that its findings might have a State-wide significance, because of the importance of the cases to be brought before it.

It was stated shortly after the charge to the jury that the cases of Mr. Pelletier and Daniel H. Coakley, both disbarred, would be the first to come before the grand jury.

Judge Fosdick looked back to the experience of Mr. Allen's last grand jury, which was dismissed because the jurors had been tampered with, out of which grew motions for contempt against various officials of the Hanover Trust Company.

He said:

"You will unquestionably be approached by persons who will attempt to influence you. You may receive letters. You are to ignore all attempts to influence your judgment, and to report them to either the court or the Attorney-General.

"It will be unwise for you to permit witnesses for the defence to enter into the proceedings." You are concerned only with witnesses for the prosecution.

"Were you to hear witnesses for the defence and then indict, such action could not help but prejudice the jury that will hear the cases later."

Whose War, Senator Borah?
Not Ours, Thank You
Six More Days
How Rich Are We?
—By Arthur Brisbane

Copyright, 1922, by Star Company

"WE MUST AID EUROPE or risk a new war," says Senator Borah. What new war? Who will start it, fight it, finance it?

How will it affect us if we mind our own business this time and stay out of it?

Is any European country going to attack us? What worry or business is it of ours—much as we regret it—if European nations insist on fighting each other after the last lesson?

THIS NATION WILL not "risk another war." It will have nothing to do with another war. It will not have Woodrow Wilson for President when that other war starts. The Kaiser will not be in a position to notify us that the seas are closed against us, and no one else will repeat that mistake of "All Highest."

Does Senator Borah imagine that the people of this country will let themselves be conscripted and trapped again by Europe to the tune of ten billions? If so, he is mistaken.

EUROPE MAY NOT have learned anything from the big war, but we learned a great deal—and, first of all, TO LET EUROPE FIGHT, MANAGE AND ESPECIALLY FINANCE HER OWN WARS.

We'll NOT risk another war, Senator Borah,' and we'll not make this country responsible for another war by calling the conference you suggest, and meddling with what does not concern us.

IF THEY MUST fight over there, we cannot help it—the Lord pity and enlighten them. Let us attend to the United States, and if we must look after others, keep our benevolence inside the limits of the Monroe Doctrine. Mr. Wilson's phrase, "the Monroe Doctrine extended to the whole world," does not suit this country. He learned that at the last big election.

HIRAM JOHNSON, and the others that fought and defeated the League of Nations, will not be found voting for any new "conference" of nations, or any scheme to dispose of American men and dollars in Europe's fights.

If Europe could count on our men and money, she would fight, of course. The way to avoid "risking another war" is to tell Europe, "Not another man, not another dollar; we shall not even discuss it."

SIX DAYS ARE left of 1922, including today. Millions will plan for improvement in 1923. A few will start the improvement now. They—the few—will still be going ahead 12 months from now—every day, in every way, as Coue would say. The only time is now. Much could be done in those last six days—everything, in fact, for THE START is everything, if you keep going.

HOW RICH IS this country? How rich could it be if

KLAN PLOTTED DEATHS OF TWO U. S. AGENTS

OFFICIALS ESCAPE HOODED RIDERS

Mer Rouge Kidnapers Foiled in Effort to Slay Government Investigators

Bastrop La., Dec. 26.—Sheriff Carpenter today sent a telegram to Dr. H. M. McGuin, former Mayor of Mer Rouge, believed to be a student at Johns Hopkins University, Baltimore, instructing him to return to Louisiana as a witness at the open hearing of the Morehouse kidnaping case at Bastrop, January 5.

Mer Rouge, La., Dec. 26.—Driven to desperation by Federal inquiry, members of the Ku Klux Klan here plotted to kidnap and murder two operatives of the Bureau of Investigation of the United States Department of Justice.

This was unearthed today simultaneously with the information that secret service men will be able to identify several members of the masked mob which last August kidnaped five residents of this city, including Watt Daniels and Thomas Richards.

These two were brutally killed. Their decapitated bodies were taken from a lake nearby last week.

ESCAPE KLAN PLOT.

Soon after secret service men began working on the case, Klansmen trailed two of the investigators. Failing to get a line on them, the Klansmen plotted to kidnap them, seize the evidence they had gathered and give them what Daniels and Richards had received.

Other operatives at work in the district warned the two agents that there was a plot to kidnap them at Collinston, while they were en route to Monroe. The warning came in time.

Signals had been transmitted to Klansmen by telephone and runners were sent out in automobiles to summon members to assemble at Collinston. Quick changes in the plans of the agents followed. They boarded another train, took another route and thus escaped.

RECOGNIZED BY FARMER.

Identity of some of the mob who kidnaped the five men and murdered Daniels and Richards was established through information given by a farmer who will be a witness at the grand jury hearing ordered by Governor Parker, to begin January 5.

This witness, it is expected, will be Harry Whetstone, who was near the scene of the flogging and who got water to fill the radiator of the automobiles used by the mob.

He is said to have recognized some of them, and after he gave his information to the Department of Justice men working here he was rushed to Baton Rouge to the State Penitentiary for safekeeping.

SAW MEN ATTACKED.

Whetstone, according to information, was on his way home from Bastrop on the afternoon of August 24, the day of the kidnaping, when he was held up by a masked crowd on the Bastrop-Mer Rouge highway, about three miles from Bastrop.

One of the men called Whetstone by name and commanded him to halt.

Whetstone obeyed and was told to go over the hill to a branch and bring a bucket of water for the thirsty mob. To make sure that he returned with the water, he was compelled to take off his coat and leave it.

When he got back with the bucket of water one of the hooded men offered 50 cents to Whetstone for the errand, but he declined to accept the money. Thinking they were through with him, he started to leave.

When he was again halted and told that he must remain, because he might give the alarm further up the highway, he was directed to take a seat on the log, where he sat for some time and saw the mob seize F. W. Daniels, T. F. Richards, J. L. Daniels, W. C. Andrews and C. O. Floyd Davenport.

While Whetstone was seated on the log, he saw a number of the hooded men raise their masks to drink from the bucket of water. This enabled him to recognize them, and among those whom he recognized, according to the story, was T. J. Burnett, his relative, and the man who is now in the Bastrop jail.

Accused by Girls

ARTHUR LEHMANN

He was held in Quincy Court today charged with attempting to attack a girl in an auto. His cousin was held on a like complaint.

ARREST NO. END HOLDUP MEN AT GUN POINT

Cheered with Christmas gifts, Arazio Azzoli whistled as he walked through Foster street, North End, to his home, No. 2 Washington place.

Two men loafed up the street ahead of him. They stopped before an alley. Azzoli came abreast. They seized him by the throat.

For full five minutes they fought. Azzoli was thrown to the pavement. He clung to one of his assailant's hat, coat and scarf. The man slipped from his jacket and both ran.

Patrolman Morris Driscoll saw two men running in Commercial street. He pursued and arrested both at gun point, took them to Hanover street station and returned to his beat.

Groans attracted the officer's attention. He found Azzoli. At Haymarket Relief it was discovered he had a fracture of the right leg. He claimed to have lost $98.

One of the two arrested was hatless and coatless, so Judge Bolster held both in $5,000 each for the Grand Jury. They gave the names of Vito Didlio of No. 8 Unity street and Harry Sorrenti of No. 55 Walnut street, Arlington Heights.

WHEELER-NICHOLSON OUT OF U. S. ARMY

Major Malcolm Wheeler-Nicholson, cavalry, was informed today by the War Department that he had been discharged from the United States army.

He was ordered two weeks ago to appear before a final board at Washington and, after examination, was sent to the Walter Reed Hospital at Washington for examination and treatment.

His was discharged as sound.

Major Wheeler-Nicholson was charged with writing a letter to President Harding accusing the army of "Prussianism," and with writing a pamphlet, "Abolish the Army or Reform It."

AGED WOMAN FOUND WANDERING

A woman, who gave her name as Rose Smith and her age as seventy-nine, was found wandering in a dazed condition about the Boston & Albany tracks in East Boston today by Michael Gilmartin of No. 31 Pope street. At the East Boston Relief Hospital she was unable to tell where she lived or give the name of friends.

MUSSOLINI TO PUT FACES ON COINS

Rome, Dec. 26.—Premier Mussolini has ordered the coinage of money in a new design, bearing the fasces, or bundle of rods carried by the ancient lictors, "as the emblem of ancient Rome and the new Italy, regenerated by the Fascisti." The Fascisti derived their name from this emblem.

ATTACK ON 2 GIRLS CHARGED

West Roxbury and Needham Youth Held After Shooting in Milton

Two boys were charged today with attacking two girls on the estate of Dr. Alexander Forbes in Milton and then with firing five shots at Fred Almgren, a chauffeur, who interfered.

The accused youths, Arthur Lehmann, twenty, of Hinsdale road, West Roxbury, and William Lehmann, twenty-three, his cousin, of Lakeside avenue, Reading, pleaded not guilty before Judge Avery in Quincy court.

The girls live in Roxbury.

According to the police, Almgren was startled by sounds of loud talking in a machine parked near his house. This was followed by screams and then two girls leaped from the car and ran toward the underbrush, closely pursued by two men.

Almgren gave chase, shouting orders to stop. A fusillade of five shots was his only answer. The men then ran back to the automobile and escaped. Almgren overtook the girls a few feet further. Both were hysterical.

The Lehmanns were later arrested. Theodore Lehmann, father of Arthur, posted surety for $600 for his son, who was held on three charges, namely, assault with a dangerous weapon, carrying a loaded revolver without a permit and assault and battery on Germania Meyer. William Lehmann, Sr., gave bonds of $1,000 for his son, who is accused with assault. The case will come up Friday.

MISS M. THERESE PERKINS

The engagement of Miss M. Therese Perkins, daughter of Henry Grover Perkins of Brookline, to Palmer Cosslett Putnam, son of Major George Haven Putnam of New York, was announced today at a luncheon at the Perkins home. Major Putnam is widely known as an author and publisher.

Miss Perkins attended Miss Winsor's school and is now a senior at Vassar. Mr. Putnam, who is a nephew of Herbert Putnam, librarian of Congress since 1899, and Miss Ruth Putnam, the authoress, is a student at Massachusetts Institute of Technology and is a member of the Number Six Club, Beaver Club and Explorers' Club of New York.

He has been on explorations among the volcanoes of Central America.

GREATEST GALE HITS ATLANTIC

Battered Liners, Overdue, Report Record Hurricane Sweeping Ocean

New York, Dec. 26.—Violent tempests of the sort known only to seasoned mariners have raged through the past week, threatening smaller vessels with destruction, wrecking steamers' deck equipment, driving fast liners out of their usual lanes and delaying them several days, according to wireless reports received today.

Officers of the Cedric, the Zeeland and the United States, which arrived several days late after weathering the worst storms in their histories, described gales which still were whipping the waves of the Atlantic.

CARONIA PUTS INTO HALIFAX.

The Manchuria and La Savoie reported today they would arrive on Thursday, two days late. The Niagara, for today, reported she would try to fight her way to port tomorrow.

The Caronia reported from Halifax that she had been forced to put in there. The Mount Carrol is due here and the President Monroe in London tomorrow, both far behind schedule.

Veterans of scores of storms who guided liners into port declared they had never before seen the North Atlantic in such a protracted hurricane mood as during the last fortnight.

2 KNOTS IN 48 HOURS.

Captain Metcalfe of the Cedric said he was forced to slow his ship to five knots by a blow only rivalled by one he had been in off Tuticorin in the Indian Ocean more than twenty years ago.

The Zeeland, which arrived three days late, had the same experience. The United States, two days overdue, for many hours fought its way through a wind which varied from 100 to 120 miles an hour in velocity. Captain Voldborg said the storm began on December 18 and lasted until December 21, when the wireless apparatus was wrecked. The ship, he said, was able to make only two knots in forty-eight hours.

1,200 TONS TOSSED OVER.

The captain of the British steamship Athelmere, which came in today, reported that he had encountered storms of hurricane force throughout the entire trip from Rotterdam. When but a few days out of the Holland port, he added, the vessel sprung a leak and 1,200 tons of her cargo of molasses had to be jettisoned. Her men were kept busy at the pumps for a number of days.

ROME PAPER URGES PACT WITH VATICAN

Rome, Dec. 26 (By the Associated Press).—Commenting on the papal encyclical the Giornale d' Italia says: "The evangelical words of the Pontiff are an invitation towards the conclusion of a definite understanding with Italy, indicating the road to be followed.

"The encyclical contains an implicit, substantial renunciation of any idea of territorial sovereignty."

The newspaper suggests that the law of guarantees, now regulating the status of the Pope in Rome, be superseded by a concordat similar to that existing with other countries.

FISHING SCHOONER O'HARA GOES ASHORE

The fishing schooner Mary E. O'Hara, with 60,000 pounds of mixed fresh fish on board, ran aground today off Point Allerton. Coast Guards went to her assistance and helped to land part of her crew. Two of her dories were smashed as the crew attempted to launch them. One man was thrown into the sea.

The latter is the daughter of Ex-Mayor Gorge H. Fall of Malden. The party, which left Boston today, inclied in its program. It will make headquarters at Manchester, Vt., and on January 1.

G.O.P. SENATORS FIGHT PLAN TO END TREATIES

Washington, Dec. 26.—Administration leaders in the Senate, although favoring abrogation of the score of commercial treaties held to impose restrictions upon American shipping indicated today they would oppose the two shipping bill amendments proposed by Senator McKellar, Democrat, Tennessee, to bring about denunciation of the pacts by Congress.

Senator Jones, Republican, Washington, in charge of the shipping bill, recalled his recent declaration that had abrogation of the treaties been brought about as directed by the merchant marine act of 1920, the shipping legislation now before the Senate probably would not have been necessary.

"Both Presidents Wilson and Harding after consultation with the State Department, held, however, that the treaties cannot properly be abrogated," he added. "In view of that, I cannot believe that the time or that the pending shipping bill is the medium to bring about such abrogation."

FORMING PARTY HERE BY ORDER OF SOVIET

New York, Dec. 26.—Steps to organize a national labor party were undertaken here today by the delegates to the second annual convention of the Workers' party. Delegates admitted the undertaking of the organization was instructed by Soviet leaders in Moscow.

The convention debated the advisability of accepting instructions from Moscow, the leaders pointing out that conditions existing in the United States often made it impolitic to follow instructions to the letter.

Ludwig Lore, editor of the New Yorker Volkszeitung, requested the delegates to consider seriously whether following the instructions from Moscow would not hamper the progress of the proletarian revolution in the United States.

Delegates took up the subject of recognizing the Communist party, which has been driven under ground by Department of Justice activities in 1920, and making an open fight for recognition. This was finally deemed indivisable.

Boston American's $25 Gift Prize Is Awarded

William R. Westwood of No. 45 Union terrace, Jamaica Plain, has been awarded the Boston American's $25 prize for the best letter suggesting gifts as a result of special Christmas advertisements appearing in the American last Friday.

Miss A. H. Nason of No. 92 Cottage street, Everett, wins favorable mention.

NEW HAVEN ISN'T SLOW AS THIS

The N. Y., N. H. & H. may breathe easier. An institution has been discovered which is slower.

A month ago Major Curley wrote to Attorney-General Daugherty at Washington, calling his attention to the shortage of turkeys and extortionate prices asked, and making complaint of violations of the Interstate Commerce law.

He received a reply today, asking for information and evidence.

In sending the required "information and evidence," the Mayor wrote to Mr. Daugherty:

"Your request that I submit information and evidence on the question of manipulation of prices of turkeys thirty days after complaint was made is most amusing and should rank high as one of the bon mots of the Christmas season."

BILL ENDS ELECTIVE SYSTEM

Rep. Brimblecom Also Would Have Governor Name Court Clerks and Sheriffs

Representative John C. Brimblecom today filed with the incoming Legislature a constitutional amendment to take away from the voters their right to elect district attorneys in the future.

The amendment authorizes the Legislature to determine whether district attorneys shall be elected or appointed.

Brimblecom says he favors their appointment by either the Governor or the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court.

"I believe," he said, "that the recent agitation regarding the office of district attorney shows there is a demand for a change of method. The amendment I propose would allow the General Court to decide whether the present method is desirable or if the district attorneys should not be appointed by the Governor or the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court.

"Action by the Legislature in some direction is imperative."

Brimblecom has also prepared another amendment to allow the Legislature to decide for the appointment or election of sheriffs, clerks of court and registers of probate.

Even though passed by the Legislature none of the amendments could become operative unless approved by the people.

MAJOR J. A. DUNN, Y. D. HERO, IS DEAD

Major John A. Dunn, hero of the Yankee division, a veteran of the Spanish War and Mexican Border expedition, and member of Pershing's general staff, is dead at his home, No. 14 Maris street, Dorchester.

The famous soldier answered the last call at the Marine Hospital, Chelsea, a victim of incapacities suffered overseas. He was 42 years old.

Major Dunn is survived by his widow and three children, by his mother, a brother and a sister. He was born in the South End.

When the 101st went overseas, "Jack" Dunn was a lieutenant, but was soon made captain of H company.

ADS DRAW TRADE TO "MARRYING JUSTICE"

Marysville, N. Y., Dec. 26.—George F. Herzog, Justice of the Peace, is advertising as a "Marrying Justice." He has inserted an advertisement in the newspapers intended to attract those matrimonially inclined, as follows:

"Are you about to get married? If so see me, knock tied that even Goliath, the strong man, could not tear asunder. George F. Herzog, Justice of the Peace. At your service day or night."

PRINCE OF DENMARK JOINS FRENCH ARMY

Copenhagen, Dec. 26.—Prince Aage, a nephew of Dowager Queen Alexandra of England, left today to join the French Foreign Legion—the section of the French army made up of all classes of persons, from nobles to derelicts.

The Prince lost all his money in the recent failure of a bank. "It is nothing to lose courage over," he said.

CHRISTMAS DINNERS FOR 35,000

45 TONS OF FOOD GIVEN

Last Minute Appeals Extend Work of Distribution Far Into Night

Forty-five tons of food, sealed and packed with rigid care, was given out to the impoverished of Greater Boston by the Boston American Christmas Basket Fund.

Approximately 35,000 persons were given their holiday dinner, figuring the average family of eight, sharing the 4,580 "baskets" dispersed.

And when the last box had been given to a worthy person, less than $10 remained of the thousands of dollars contributed by readers of the Boston American, in their effort to hold out the helping hand of good cheer to their less fortunate brothers and sisters.

OF HIGHEST QUALITY.

Packed in sealed cartons, after having been inspected by officials of the Boston Health Department, the foodstuffs were the best that could be obtained. Only food of the highest quality was accepted.

The packets were distributed from the wholesale house of Cobb, Bates & Yerxa at No. 222 Summer street. More than fifty men employed by the firm gave their services to the distribution of the baskets. Vice President James D. Casey of the Cobb, Bates & Yerxa Company took personal charge of the work. Originally 4,300 packets were ordered, but the rush made it necessary to requisition for 280 more. Mr. Casey immediately put his men to work and the extra rush was well handled.

AUTOS DONATED.

Despite the rush of extra business the Town Taxi Company obligingly furnished a large touring car which was used in transporting aged and infirm women to their homes, with their precious carton. Private cars were also donated and, where it was impossible for some members of a needy family to go to the distributing point, an auto was sent to their house with their Christmas dinner.

In the midst of the rush a little girl, typical of the thousands who were in the line, handed a Christmas Basket Fund representative a letter. It read:

"Please send us the food by express because mother cannot come because we expect a baby any day. Please send it."

In less than five minutes an auto was on the way to the East Boston home, bearing the little girl and the dinner for her family.

Pathos was apparent on all sides. Some of the women, too weak to carry the twenty-pound carton and the bread, were bundled into machines and taken to their homes.

O'BRIEN WATCHES

Not the least interested in watching the proceedings was District Attorney Thomas O'Brien. For hours he stood in a nearby window, watching the poor of the city receive their box of cheer, and he expressed himself feelingly on what he saw.

Far into the night the work of distribution continued. The late mails brought the eleventh hour deluge of appeals. Bright and early next morning the work resumed and the volunteer workers did not stop until the last basket went out through the door.

Charles R. Lothrop, who superintended the work of packing the boxes, is deserving of credit for the very commendable piece of work performed. He was ably assisted by George Haynes. The chickens were all selected by C. E. Wood, meat buyer, and it is safe to say that not a home in Boston boasted more tender birds.

In addition to the Town Taxi Co., machines were kindly loaned loaned by James O'Rourke, No. 66 Spring Garden street, Dorchester; John Costello, South Boston; Mrs. N. W. F. Whittemore, Back Bay.

Among the volunteers that did excellent work in distributing the "baskets" were Mr. and Mrs. O. B. Williams of Quincy, Miss Helen M. Rourke, South Boston; Mrs. Fred Healy, Mrs. Ella Silver and John F. Pulle of the North End.

Christmas is now a matter of history, so far as 1922 is concerned. Once again the residents of Greater Boston have shown their liberal generosity in behalf of those in less fortunate circumstances. And the Boston American wishes to thank every single person, who by a cash donation or otherwise, assisted in making this annual work a success.

Cure Yourself by Radio and Coue Is the Latest

New York, Dec. 26.—Next time you have an ache or a pain, you have lost a girl, your horse also ran, the flat is cold, the neighbors kid is bawling or your "Charley horse" is bothering, just hitch your aerial to a lamp socket, or the bathtub drain.

The first "cure" by radio, combining a pretty girl, Coue and Shakespeare—and who could ask a better combination—is reported by Christian Buehrer of Newark, N. J., who says that Miss Mona Morgan's rendition of Shakespearian verse, as part of her radio lesson on Coue's system, made him forget his sciatic rheumatism for the first time since it struck him months ago.

$150,000 FIRE IN VT. CENTRAL CAR SHOPS

St. Albans, Vt., Dec. 26.—A loss unofficially estimated at about $150,000 was caused by fire today at the shops of the Central Vermont Railway.

Railroad officials today could not state whether the shops would be rebuilt.

The machine shop, which was but a few feet to the east of the main line and the railroad station were endangered. Burning paint made the heat so intense that it was impossible for the fire-fighters and shopmen to get near the buildings. The wind carried the fire to the bridge shop and this building was destroyed.

Two coaches and one mail car were burned.

About seventy-five men, many of whom had just returned to work after being out five months on the strike, will be out of employment.

DEATH PLOTTED BY KLAN

partment of Justice. He is also said to have told Secret Service men that Burnett has a homicide record and had killed two negroes a few years ago.

After Whetstone had disappeared Fonce Klansmen became greatly alarmed and attempted to locate him. Secret Service operatives have information, it is understood, that they employed detectives who traced Whetstone to Baton Rouge and thence to New Orleans, where they lost the trail. To date they have not been able to find him.

Plans for the open hearing here probably will be completed at a conference in New Orleans Thursday of those conducting the inquiry. The coroner's inquest over the bodies of Daniels and Richards and the report of the New Orleans pathologists who conducted the autopsy will be discussed.

VICTIMS ARE FLOGGED.

Department of Justice agents have reconstructed the events on the night of the murder from the facts gathered in their investigations.

Watt Daniels, J. L. Daniels, his father, W. C. Andrews and Thomas Richards were taken to a secluded spot the night of August 24. J. L. Daniels and Andrews were flogged and tortured within the sight of the former's son who managed to break his bonds and jump at the attackers.

The Federal agents then picture Watt Daniels being subdued and taken out of earshot of the elder Daniels' cries. They then believe that young Daniels broke loose from one of his captors and tore the mask off his face, calling out his name so that Richards could hear. Before cooler heads could prevail, one of the mob shot and killed young Daniels.

However, Richards heard the name, the agents argue, and because of an oath of brotherhood or the fear of detection, the less controlled members of the mob held out for the killing of Richards and the throwing of both bodies in the lake.

ADMITS KILLING JAMAICA PLAIN RESIDENT

Fred Hesselgren, under arrest in connection with the murder of Felix Lagg, of No. 286 Amory street, Jamaica Plain, has confessed to the crime, according to the authorities.

He was taken into custody following a stabbing affair in Lagg's home, which ended in Lagg's death.

The two men were seated in the kitchen when an argument started. A few minutes later Thomas Connors, another occupant of the house, heard a man scream for help. He notified the police.

Patrolmen found Lagg lying on the floor, unconscious. He was dead before arriving at City Hospital. Lagg's son was at home when the crime was committed. He was in another room.

Hesselgren was arraigned before Judge Turner in West Roxbury Court today, waived examination and was held without bail for the Grand Jury.

DARTMOUTH TO PUBLISH WAR RECORD

Dartmouth College authorities are soon to publish a war record of the college, which will contain the individual record of service of the 3407 Dartmouth men who took part in the war and also an illustrated account of the part played by the college itself in the war.

Among the many chapters in the book will be the foreward by President Ernest Martin Hopkins, "Friends of France," by Professor Richard W. Husband, associate Dean of the college; "Hanover and the College in War Time" by Professor Edwin J. "Bobby" Bartlett; "Academic Adjustments" by Dean Craven Laycock; "The Military Stores School" by Dean William R. every man did his best day's work, every day; if big men thought of the nation instead of thinking of themselves; if those that serve the government were half as loyal as a college boy to his football team.

Usually we spend about five thousand million dollars on Christmas. This year, partly on account of high tariff, the people spent more than eight thousand millions—just for one day.

What could such a nation do, with its undeveloped resources, if it had a plan and guidance.

WILLIAM H. SCHUSCHARDT, president of Wisconsin City and County Planners, predicts a city of 50,000,000—a city 15 miles long reaching from Milwaukee, through into Indiana. That city of three States is a distinct probability, and it is not at all certain where its centre will be, perhaps Chicago, perhaps Milwaukee.

The centre of New York, before long, will be well out on Long Island and Brooklyn will be the big city, Manhattan the smaller old city. The island of the Seine was once all of Paris and the Louvre, across the river, was the place where the King hunted wolves.

The city of 50,000,000 will come. Then, thanks to flying machines, all cities will disappear. There will be manufacturing centres toward which workers will fly from hill and mountain tops, as gulls fly out to their fishing grounds on the ocean.

PROFESSOR TERMAN, who teaches psychology at Stanford University, says of being remarkable that if you have a genius among your ancestors your chances are 500 times what they would be otherwise.

Galton said it differently, long ago. It is absolutely certain that genius and ordinary superiority of mind are inherited.

It is certain also, that what we call genius now will be dullness 50,000 years from now.

The business of the human race is to build up the average, by wise marriage and universal education. Genius will take care of itself.

IN DEALING WITH the Arbuckle case, Will H. Hays was in a hard position. Reinstating Arbuckle is not generally popular, and he knew it would not be. Public opinion in this case is formed by those that have not heard the evidence. The jury that tried and acquitted Arbuckle, made up of eight men and four women, all church members, not only acquitted him, but signed this statement: "Acquittal is not enough for Roscoe Arbuckle. We feel that a great injustice has been done him, for there was not the slightest proof adduced to connect him in any way with the commission of any crime."

HAYS KNEW THAT reinstating Arbuckle would not be a good thing for Hays, or for the motion picture industry, but like the judge that discharged Arbuckle, Hays was obliged to accept the facts, and acquit him also.

The entire matter is unimportant. No one need see Arbuckle against his will. The main thing is the moving picture, greatest educational force since the invention of the printing press.

Employes of the building in which the rooms are situated said they had not been told the office would be closed, and declared they knew nothing about Mr. McGrath or his affairs.

'BOBBY' SAVAGE BACK FROM ALASKA HUNGRY

he knew nothing during the spectacular three-day honeymoon at the Motel Biltmore, which cost him at the rate of $35 an hour.

Hungry and Broke

The romantic son of the late John A. Savage, millionaire steel man of Minnesota, just about to attain his majority, learned on his arrival here several days ago that the annulment obtained by Miss Mitchell is to be effective January 25 next.

He has received word from his counsel in New York, Root, Clark, Buckner and Howland, and from Miss Mitchell's attorney, Henry W. Sherrerd, of New York, that he will be free in another few weeks.

Savage has telegraphed all his brothers far and, but they have not replied. So, in hope of effecting a reconciliation through his mother, he has left for La Jolla, Cal., to see her.

Meanwhile he has written a remarkable narrative of his night life on Broadway and the story of the swift romance that culminated in an elopement March 4 last to Milford, Conn., and which ended after a three-day honeymoon at the Biltmore with the bride he had called "My Madonna."

Off Broadway

"Bob" is bronzed from his three months in Alaska and intends to "keep his feet on the ground" hereafter. He is through with Broadway and the gay life. And through with marriage. For he said:

"When I get to Jolla, Cal., I am going to call up my sister to try to arrange things with my mother. It will be many a weary day before I take myself a wife again. And she won't be a Broadway chorus girl, if I do. I have learned my lesson, and even if it was a costly one, I am glad, for I really have learned it."

In Alaska he penetrated far into the interior by boat, horse, dog and sledge. He went there to escape notoriety. But he has come back, willing to tell his story of Broadway, so that he may save other young men of wealth.

By ROBERT S. ("BOB") SAVAGE.

Last Christmas, with $75,000 to spend, a splendid holiday ahead of me in New York, high hopes of making good in athletics at Yale, and rather shy hopes of doing something creditable as a poet later on, I felt, as some more successful bardster has said, that "The world was mine oyster."

This year I can't quite rise to the occasion, somehow.

It has been a vivid year. But there was too much of it for one annum. I have experienced the exhilaration of Broadway night life, I have chummed with the gay theatrical crowd and patronized only the most accomplished of bootleggers.

Blames Only Self

I have known "love at first sight," have had three $8,000 days of honeymooning at the Biltmore with one of the prettiest chorus girls in New York and have been through the very cynicism of the finish of such a marriage.

Perhaps I might not have made such a wild mess of things if I had had a father when I was growing up.

But at any rate I take all the blame myself.

It surely was not the fault of my mother, nor of my four brothers who tried to take the place of father to me, and, least of all, was it the fault of pretty little Geneva Mitchell.

However, if blame is to be charged to me, I should like, at least to place the whole story before the public as it really happened. If some other young fellow with too much money for his own good can get any benefit from the story, so much the better.

Proud of Brothers

Let me go back to the fall of 1921, when I entered Yale as a freshman, proud of the record of my four brothers there before me.

My eldest brother, John A. Savage, was graduated in 1904 and now is president of the John A. Savage Company, iron and steel manufacturers, of Duluth, Minn.

My second oldest brother, Joseph A. Savage, was graduated in 1907 and now is Cincinnati representative for the John A. Savage Company.

Ed was the third to enter and he distinguished himself at college as tackle and full back of Ted Coy's famous football team that went through the season of 1909 without their goal line having been crossed.

After he was graduated in 1911 he went to work for Guggenheim Brothers in New York and now holds a prominent position in the firm.

Will, who preceded me at Yale, played football for four years and was varsity quarterback in his last year, 1915. He is with my brother John in Duluth.

So, with the fine example of my four brothers before me, I entered college with high ambitions and hopes. I was determined to win the coveted "Y" in football and baseball, and I had played a fair game in these sports during my preparatory school days.

Unexpected Wealth

My other ambition was to become a poet. I had always written verse and felt I possessed talent along this line. This feeling was not discouraged by the fact that one volume of my short poems has already been published and has received favorable comment from the critics.

Up to a few days before Christmas of last year I had never tasted liquor nor smoked a cigarette; and I thus entered college with the highest ideals and ambitions.

My first semester I played a little football, and got on well enough in class.

Then a few weeks before Christmas a wealthy uncle of mine in Australia, to whom I had read some of my verses, unexpectedly placed $25,000 to my credit in a New York bank.

I was amazed at the drawing power of poetry.

Never before had I so large a sum all at once.

I was intoxicated with the possibilities of $25,000 of Christmas funds.

Of course, the one place that attracted me was Broadway, only seventy-two miles away.

Broadway, with its glittering lights.

Broadway, with its beautiful women, wonderful plays and syncopated cafes!

Although I had planned to spend the holidays with a school pal, I quickly changed my mind. No place but Broadway could do justice to the time I was determined to have with my new excess of wealth.

Hits Great White Way

And so to Broadway I hied myself as soon as school was dismissed on December 18.

Wiring my brother Ed, who lives with his wife and two attractive children on Riverside Drive, near Ninety-eighth street, I hit town the evening that school was out.

Ed extended me a welcome that was more than cordial. He gave me a room in his large apartment entirely separate from the rest of the family, presented me with a latch key, and told me I could come and go as I wished. His charming wife seconded his offers of hospitality, and informed me that she had invited a few friends in for the evening to entertain me.

But I had made other plans for my first night in the city. The prospects of a game of bridge or a vicious dance with a few insipid and uninteresting debutantes and the ultra-respectable friends of my brother and sister-in-law had no lure for me.

My old friend and prep school companion, Dale Selznick, had prepared a party for me that sounded more interesting. And there were no simpering, finishing schoolgirls concerned in it, either.

Owen Moore, film star and former husband of Mary Pickford, and Katherine Perry, former stage beauty, now Mrs. Moore, headed the list of David Selznick's guests for the evening. The four of us were to see a play early in the evening and then repair to the midnight frolic atop the Amsterdam Theatre roof, where we were to join a larger party.

After the frolic closed at 1 o'clock a number of persons joined us and the fun continued.

I was informed that the party was to be slightly "damp" and I had determined to try out the red eye for myself.

Wrecks His Life

So my brother Ed's plans for a quiet evening at home had no appeal for me, I mumbled a hastily invented alibi, borrowed their closed car, and started on my way to the Plymouth Theatre to join the gang.

The play was to be Ben Ami in "The Idle Inn," about which all New York was talking at the time.

When I started I little dreamed what it was all to lead to. If I had known then what I do now the whole course of my life might have been changed.

That one night's pleasure stopped my college career, has cost me many of my best friends, the confidence of my family, and the trust of my mother.

It gained me a wife I could not keep, the recollection of having been the sensation of Broadway for a few weeks, and the loss of not only my Uncle Gill Draper's $25,000 present, but of thousands of dollars I received from my family besides.

Was it worth it? Well, at least it gained me a million dollars' worth of experience and taught me a lesson I will not soon forget.

'HONEST' BOOTLEGGER RETURNS STOLEN LOOT

Minneapolis, Minn., Dec. 26.—Last October a polite bandit held up the jewelry store of A. Sains here, took about $1,000 worth of jewelry and apologized to Mr. Sains. "I'll return all this if I make good as a bootlegger," he said. Today Chief of Police Frank Semmer received a package, which when opened, deluged a stream of watches, rings, necklaces and other jewelry on his desk. A letter enclosed said the valuables should be returned to Mr. Sains. "I am glad he has succeeded.

WOMAN KEEPS VIGIL OVER MAN SHE SLAYS

Louisville, Ky., Dec. 26.—A woman's story of a quarrel, a shot and her vigil from dusk to dawn over the body of the man she killed was being checked up by police today.

"I killed my friend," Mrs. Olive L. Jones, thirty-two years old, pretty divorcee announced when she entered police headquarters.

This was the first intimation officials had that O. L. Black, sales manager for a Louisville automobile company, had been shot dead Sunday in Mrs. Jones' apartment.

Mrs. Jones said she fired in self-defense. Black, she said, became angry when he learned her daughter Clara, seventeen, was with her and that her divorced husband, C. H. Jones of Cincinnati, was to visit his daughter.

Black feared Mrs. Jones declared, that a reconciliation would be effected.

When Black, who, she declared, "broke up my home and caused me to get a divorce," reached for a pistol on a nearby table she seized the weapon first and fired. Black fell.

She covered him with his coat and a quilt. All night long she kept the death watch. Never was she able to summon courage to call the police. Three times, she declared, she went to the telephone and three times turned away.

100 Men Over Ninety to Tell Longevity Recipe at Dinner

New York, Dec. 26.—The old quip about the good dying young will be exploded here on December 29, when Ezra Meeker will entertain the youth of New York, who have reached ninety years or more, at his birthday dinner.

Ezra is counting on at least 100 guests and each must tell just how he has dodged the pall bearers. Ezra will do likewise. The statements will be given to the press to show the world whether liquor and love really have any relation to longevity.

Chauncey Depew will be the baby at the table, he being only 88. It is because he is such a good story teller that Meeker has let down the bars a little in his case.

Meeker was born in Butler county, Ohio, and went over the Oregon trail in 1852.

DOCTORS SCORE TRANSFER OF GLANDS

New Orleans, La., Dec. 26.—"Gland implanting, as a means of restoring youthful powers to the old, men or women, is a fallacy."

Dr. Rudolph Matas, head of the medical department of Tulane University and former president of the American Medical Association, is authority for this statement.

"The idea that aged persons, who have lost physical powers through natural processes, can be made young again by the grafting of a goat or a monkey gland, or a human gland, is too ridiculous to be discussed seriously," Dr. Matas continued.

"A man is as old as his arteries. When these begin to harden and to grow tough, when the head becomes bald or the hair gray, when the bones grow brittle, making him young again is stretching the impossible into a thorough falsehood."

KELLOGG MAY SUCCEED FALL IN CABINET

Washington, Dec. 26.—Frank B. Kellogg, Republican, Minnesota, defeated for re-election to the Senate, may be chosen as a successor to Secretary of the Interior A. B. Fall, who will retire from the Cabinet within the next few months.

No date has been set for Secretary Fall's retirement, but it is generally understood he will leave at the completion of two years of service next March.

Senator Kellogg is a friend of Mr. Harding and a member of the so-called "presidential foursome" at golf.

GLOBE THEATRE—The feature pictures at the Globe were "Rich Men's Wives," a stirring dramatic story with an all-star cast, and Conway Tearle in "Love's Masquerader." A late comedy, news pictorial and other screen subjects were also shown.

Wins Ma Ma Doll

MARY SYLVESTER.

Eight-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Armour Sylvester reveals how pleased she is to win a Boston American Ma Ma doll in this photo. Mary secured ten subscriptions of the Boston American for six months among her neighbors, and any other girl who does likewise can secure a doll free.

GIRL AND SONG REVUE OPENS AT WALDRON'S

"Broadway Brevities," the big girl and song revue, which began a week's engagement at Waldron's Casino, delighted two large audiences with its array of winsome maidens, its succession of melodious songs and brisk dances, its rich effects in scenes and costuming and its mirthful comedy. Two dramatic films and headline vaudeville completed the three-in-one continuous program.

This is the same big, elaborate entertainment that was originally produced at the New York Winter Garden with Bert Williams as the featured member of the cast. It is far beyond the average size of burlesque revues, having a dozen and a half big sets of scenery, many of them elaborate creations, and a large chorus of girls of the "peach" variety.

BIG MUSICAL REVUE PLEASES AT GAYETY

Patrons of the Gayety Theatre this week are making themselves a Christmas present of a lot of fun. Two opening audiences laughed themselves to high spirits at "Hello Good Times," a jolly musical revue with Nat (Chick) Haines as the leading mirth-maker.

"Hello Good Times" is founded on the principle of "Laugh and the world laughs with you." Chick Haines wrote the show and he stuffed the book with breezy lines. The music is the kind to match—tuneful and snappy.

Chick Haines, who made repeated successes in vaudeville and legitimate, is in burlesque for his first season. He is the breezy, jolly, rapid-fire type. He kept the laughs coming fast yesterday.

TECHNICOLOR FILM AT LOEW'S STATE

For the first time in Boston a picture produced in technicolor, the latest invention in natural photography, the result of more than seven years of scientific research, was shown at Loew's State Theatre. The picture is so marvelous that one wonders at its remarkable naturalness. The story of "The Toll of the Sea" centres around Lotus Flower, a Chinese maiden and a young American who is washed ashore from a shipwreck. The companion picture was "Peg O' My Heart," starring Laurette Taylor who created and played the role of Peg for a consecutive run of more than 600 performances in New York City.

NEW MUSICAL PLAY AT SHUBERT THEATRE

"In Springtime of Youth," a musical comedy of early New England, opened its local engagement at the Shubert Theatre last evening. Prominent in the cast were George MacFarlane, Olga Steck, Harry K. Morton and Zella Russell. The book of the piece was written by Bernhauser and Schanzer, and the music was by Walter Rollo and Sigmund Romberg. The attraction is under the management of Lee and J. J. Shubert.

"In Springtime of Youth," will be reviewed in the American tomorrow.

"BEGGAR'S OPERA" ON ITS FINAL WEEK

The final week of "The Beggar's Opera" was begun with last night's performance at the Fine Arts Theatre. This remarkable musical comedy which is now in its eighth week has proven itself extremely popular. Its lyrics are extremely racy and its melodies remarkably tuneful. Though written nearly 200 years ago, its satire is as applicable to the people and politics of the present day as of the time of which it speaks. The final performance will take place on December 30.

HAMPDEN SEEN IN ROLE OF HAMLET

The revival of the classic drama has spread to Boston. Walter Hampden, now in the front rank of Shakespearean interpreters, opened his two weeks' engagement at the Boston Opera House most auspiciously with that paragon of tragedies, "Hamlet."

Profound for years by pseudo tragedians, Hamlet, Shakespeare's greatest character, is periodically given real life by such actors as Hampden.

"Hamlet" contains some of Shakespeare's most poignant philosophy. Mr. Hampden uttered the thought jewels with effective nuance of feeling and intellectual understanding.

The cast was very well balanced with C. Norman Hammond as the King of Denmark, Ruth Chorpenning as Queen, Mabel Moore as Ophelia, Edwin Cushman as the Ghost and Allen Thomas as the wily old Polonius, the Lord Chamberlain.

The scenery and stage settings showed the influence of modern impressions and were good back ground for the tragic figure of Hamlet. Especially striking was the climax of the grave scene in the third act.

MORE CHEERS THAN HISSES FOR 'FATTY'

New York, Dec. 26.—Roscoe C. Arbuckle will stage a comeback if the reception of an audience at Park Music Hall, Columbus Circle, may be taekn as any criterion.

Every time the roly-poly face of the fat comedian flashed on the screen it was greeted with enthusiastic applause and some cheers. Occasionally came a half-hearted hiss.

There was a capacity audience and some of the patrons were so eager to get inside that they smashed one of the glass doors leading to the lobby.

There had been but comparatively little advertising of the Arbuckle showing and that was confined to the immediate neighborhood.

"GOOD MORNING DEARIE" AT COLONIAL

"Good Morning Dearie" was presented at the Colonial Theatre last evening under the direction of Charles Dillingham. This is the musical comedy that was presented for more than 400 times at the Globe Theatre in New York. Anne Caldwell wrote the book and Jerome Kern composed the music. In the cast are Louise Groody, Oscar Shaw, Harland Dixon, William Kent and Ada Lewis.

"Good Morning Dearie" will be reviewed in the American on Thursday.

Used Oftener than Any Other Bottle in the Bath Room

PERSONAL hygiene is of prime importance to women. It is of vital importance to the whole human race.

Woman's ability to maintain perfect anatomical cleanliness safeguards human life at its very source.

Heretofore women have, like martyrs, braved the dangers of harsh, devouring poisons and have paid the penalty with ill health, shattered nerves and premature old age.

Surgical records show a multitude of operations for the removal of vital organs of women which have become atrophied or dangerously defective through the continued use of poisonous disinfectants.

Beware of Poisons

Bichloride of mercury, phenol, cresol and their many compounds are now in general use by women. These have been used because there was nothing to take their place. The continued use of these corrosive poisons is exceedingly harmful and deleterious to health. The medical profession recognizes this fact and has discouraged their use.

The discovery of Zonite, the new antiseptic, is a tremendous boon to womankood. A last perfect personal hygiene for women is assured without the use of poisons. Zonite is far more efficient than the poisonous solutions employed heretofore and is beneficial rather than destructive to health.

Zonite is absolutely safe, sure and dependable. It promptly destroys the disease germs with which it comes in contact and at the same time has a soothing and stimulating effect on sensitive membranes and tissues.

A Toilet Necessity

Another important use of Zonite in the personal hygiene of women is as a deodorant. It overcomes and destroys body odors effectively and promptly without leaving any odor of its own. Many body deodorants are designed to disguise the odor with a perfume. This is an unsatisfactory method. Others clog the pores from which the excretions come. Zonite does not merely disguise the odor but eliminates it at its inception.

Zonite is the one effective antiseptic for safe personal disinfection. It meets every antiseptic requirement of every woman. It is a toilet indispensable.

Facts About Zonite

Zonite is a clear, stainless, non-odorous liquid.

Zonite is non-poisonous, non-caustic and non-irritating.

Although more than twice as powerful as pure carbolic acid, Zonite has a healing, soothing effect and will not injure the most delicate flesh, skin or membrane.

Germ-life can not develop in a solution of 1 part Zonite to 150 parts water. Zonite is therefore a most efficient antiseptic for personal hygiene.

Zonite quickly dissipates noisome body odors without leaving any objectionable odor of its own.

This form of antiseptic has been adopted and is in universal daily use by the medical profession throughout the civilized world.

Zonite has a hundred uses in the home. There is nothing to take its place.

FESS DECLARES EUROPE BARS U. S. RELIEF

By SIMEON D. FESS,
One of the Administration's Closest Advisers in the Present House and Senator-Elect from President Harding's Home State.

(Written Expressly for Universal Service.)

The immediate question uppermost is reparations. The delay of final and definite decision is largely due to failure to reach an agreement of what it should be—failure not so much because of differences of judgment of what is best, but fear of results back home of the decision. Thus an economic verdict delayed from political fear.

PARTIES IN INTEREST.

It is not so much the size of the reparations as the certainty of the final amount. So long as the latter is indefinite, the maximum of energy will not be attempted, the bankruptcy of Germany will be pleaded as a defense, and outside relief will be impossible.

This situation must be relieved by Europe, NOT BY AMERICA, what shall be the final decision of German's ability to pay must be determined by the parties in interest. Until the proper parties take this step THEY BAR ALL RELIEF FROM OUTSIDE, AND ESPECIALLY FROM THE UNITED STATES.

The strained contention of interested parties that our own industrial welfare demands our intervention as both unwise and untrue. Our exports the present year are quite double what they were before the war. Europe has the buying power awaiting its increase if common sense principles of production are recognized. She must work and save—nothing else will win.

In our desire to help we will not involve ourselves in complications which are neither effectual for those we desire to assist, nor conductive to our own safety. The very best thing we can do for Europe is to let her know once for all that economic assistance depends upon her putting her house in order first. House-cleaning is her own task, not ours.

Should it appear to us that France in her own interest should reduce her demands upon Germany, France would quite naturally believe she is once upon the same grounds demand of us to make a like reduction of the debt she owes to us. America's Debtor Law has declared England's inability to pay us what she owes unless France can pay her what she owes. France stands ready to pay unless Germany is made to pay.

FRENCH DEMAND.

America's economic aid will flow to Europe, not officially, but naturally and industrially, the moment Europe takes steps to assure stability. Capital is here awaiting investment, which will never enter any country so long as policies prevail that preclude the possibility of industrial revival.

ERASTUS BRAINERD, EDITOR, DIES IN WEST

Seattle, Wash., Dec. 26.—Erastus Brainerd, sixty-seven years old, famous editor and publicist, and for many years publisher and editor-in-chief of The Seattle Post Intelligencer, died here of pneumonia.

He is survived by a wife and two daughters, Betty Brainerd, feature writer for a New York newspaper syndicate, and Mrs. H. H. Walbeke, of Great Falls, Mont.

Mr. Brainerd, in addition to his newspaper interests, at one time was curator of engravings at the Boston Museum of Fine Arts.

SEVEN BEAT THEIR WAY OUT OF JAIL

Detroit, Dec. 26.—Using broomsticks and mop-handles as weapons, seven prisoners, four said to be desperate characters, escaped from Wayne County Jail.

Four jail attendants were on duty when the break for liberty took place. William Ackerman, guard, was overpowered, after which the prisoners ran down to the office of Deputy Sheriff J. A. Pusho. Pusho seized a revolver and is said to have pulled the trigger three times, but none of the cartridges exploded. After beating him, the prisoners took his keys.

XMAS UNITES LOST BROTHER AND SISTER

Westhampton Beach, N. Y., Dec. 26—Mrs. Mildred Schmittman, of Newark, and her three children are guests at the home of John L. King, local publisher. Mr. King is Mrs. Schmittman's brother, but they never saw each other.

Mr. King and his sister were children of Edward Pounding, and when King was less than three weeks old his mother died. The three younger children were adopted by different families, whose names they took, and lost trace of one another.

Until three weeks ago Mrs. Schmittman did not know of King's existence.

CAPT. THOMAS OLSEN IS DEAD IN HULL

Captain Thomas Olsen, sixty-two years old, of Main street, Hull, one of the best known fishermen in this part of New England, is dead from pneumonia. He followed the sea for several years, but for the past few summer seasons, he was captain of the private yacht owned by James Hooper, wealthy Boston banker and Hull resident. He is survived by three sons: Thomas, Oliver and Harold Olsen, and a daughter, Mrs. Ruth Ayer, all of Hull.

MAYORS OF TWO CITIES GREET SCIENTISTS

Several thousand of the most eminent scientists in America registered today at the Institute of Technology for the meeting this week of the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

Topics of scientific interest ranging from plant culture to radio will be discussed at various sessions to be held during the week, and many discoveries not yet made public will be described. The meetings are open to the public, most of them taking place at Tech and a few at Harvard.

A meeting of the executive committee was held today in the library at the Hotel Somerset when the final arrangements for the coming sessions were made.

The Entomological Society of America, a branch organization, held its first session today, and a council meeting of the American Mathematical Society was held at the Phillips Brooks House at Harvard. An informal tea was served at the American Academy of Arts and Sciences, No. 28 Newbury street.

This evening the entire association will be welcomed in the Walker Memorial Building. M. I. T., by Mayor Quinn of Cambridge, Mayor Curley of Boston, Dean H. P. Talbot of M. I. T. and President Lowell of Harvard. These speakers will be introduced by Professor Samuel C. Prescott of M. I. T., chairman of the local committee on arrangements.

Weston Minister to Take Sewing Circle Girl As Bride Tomorrow, Says Betty Alden

By BETTY ALDEN.

WHEN Miss Linda Wellington promises to "love, honor and obey" her future helpmeet, the Rev. Palfrey Perkins, tomorrow at high noon, another member of the 1920-21 Sewing Circle coterie will have joined the ranks of the Married Maidens —as the Social Register terms them.

The wedding takes place at No. 13 Chestnut street, the Winter home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Louis B. Wellington. The ceremonial is to be distinctly quiet, the bride having no attendants. Colonel Holton B. Perkins will serve as best man for the bridegroom, a Harvard '20 man and son of Mrs. George H. Perkins of Weston.

The Wellingtons spend a good portion of the year at their country home in Weston, where the groom has been minister of the First Parish Church since 1918. His fiancee is the sister of Mrs. Dudley P. Ranney (Margaret Wellington), who has shown not a little talent in the Vincent Club shows, and of Mrs. Thomas D. Cabot (Virginia Wellington).

MISS KATHERINE GRAY WITH HER FAVORITE PET

Miss Katherine Gray, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Cunningham Gray of Beacon street and Marblehead. (Photo by Bachrach)

THE CHARLIE CHOATES of Southboro have already arrived for the season at Palm Beach, where they spent a jolly Winter last year entertaining quite a few Bostonians during their season there.

MISS KATHERINE GRAY, I suppose, surely helped her engagie mater, Mrs. James Cunningham Gray, during the past week in the good work of filling stockings for disabled soldiers. Mrs. Gray was in charge of this undertaking, as she was last year. A few of the matrons on her committee included Mesdames John Balch, Russell S. Codman, Lester Leland and Leverett S. Tuckerman, 2d.

Miss Gray was to have been presented this season, but some time ago it was decided to postpone her debut for another year. The Grays have a Wir se home on Beacon street, theI, Summer place being at Nahant.

ONE hears of the rage in Washington for fur-trimmed evening gowns. Nor is Milady content with narrow bands of fur, she must needs have huge borders, sometimes fully six inches wide, and these on the bottom of filmy frocks.

As there is always a square collar of fur at the back of the bodice, this adds much to the discomfort of the dancers. But then the god of style never lacks for worshipers. I note that ermine fur on black velvet is distinctly popular here, while others have decided that ermine on white is rather more distinctive.

MRS. EDWARD J. HOLMES of Beacon street went over to New York for the reception which her brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert C. Lakin of Scarsdale, gave the other afternoon at the Colony Club to present their two daughters, the Misses Hattie Beaman and Eleanor Putnam Lakin. Mrs. Holmes helped to receive with the debutante sisters, who are grand-daughters of the late Charles C. Beaman, noted lawyer of his day. Mrs. Holmes was formerly Miss Mary S. Beaman.

MR. AND MRS. FREDERICK S. WHITWELL are giving a dance on Friday evening of next week in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Richard H. Dana, who are now settled at their home on Brattle street, Cambridge. Following their marriage last February at Emmanuel Church the Danas went on a long wedding journey to Europe, from which they returned only a short time ago.

Speaking of Mrs. Whitwell, the latter looked quite regal as she stood in the centre of the receiving line at the Army and Navy ball the other evening. She wore a gorgeous opalescent gown and a filet of gold in her hair to complete the costume. Mr. Whitwell, as one of the real leaders of the Army and Navy Club, was there, too, of course. He is certainly one of the jolliest looking men I ever saw, with his red cheeks and snow-white hair.

GREECE DEFIES TURKS TO EXILE PATRIARCH

London, Dec. 26 (By International News Service).—Greece has refused to accede to the Turkish demand for the withdrawal of the Greek Patriarch from Constantinople regardless of the decision of the allied powers, according to an Exchange Telegraph dispatch from Athens today. The dispatch quoted the Greek Premier as declaring that the question was one of first importance and that the Greek government was not able to surrender.

Venizelos Expresses Gratitude to Red Cross

Lausanne, Dec. 26 (By the Associated Press).—Former Premier Venizelos, in a Christmas message to the American Red Cross, expressed the gratitude of the Greek people for America's generosity in succoring the millions of refugees in Greece.

"We face the future with courage," the message said, "but we are conscious of its perils. Only by the continuance of your help can misery be permanently removed.

"Praying to the same God and celebrating the nativity of the same Christ, we express our thanks."

Seattle, Wash., Dec. 26.—Search for Grover Cleveland Bergdoll, who escaped in May, 1920, while serving a five-year sentence for desertion from the United States Army and who had been reported on a German vessel bound for the Pacific coast, was set afoot here by a report that he had been seen in a restaurant. The proprietor told police that one of three men who ate in his cafe looked very much like published pictures of Bergdoll and bore a scrutiny uneasily.

SAVE 7 CHILDREN IN WESTFIELD FIRE

Westfield, Dec. 26.—Seven young children ranging from one year to fourteen years were driven to the street when fire partially destroyed the home of William J. Curtis of Curtis street. The parents, awakened by the smell of smoke, herded the children together and carried them to neighbors. The Christmas tree of the children burned in the fire, which was caused by defective wiring.

"LIGHTNIN'" AT HOLLIS TAKES HUB BY STORM

By NICHOLAS YOUNG.

Lightnin' Bill Jones came to the Hollis last evening and it is placing no great strain on the truth to remark that he is in for a long visit. At any rate, he got away to a fair start.

The long delayed expedition of "Lightnin'" into this community has not, apparently, resulted in any lessening of interest in the play and character made famous by the lamented Frank Bacon. As played by Percy Pollock last evening Lightnin' Bill Jones made a complete conquest of his first Boston audience. Call it hokum, if you will, old-fashioned rural drama or sentimental balderdash, the fact still fingers in your face that it is exactly what the public enjoys in its drama.

SENTIMENT AND LAUGHTER.

After nearly five years of box office opulence that has not been equalled, or even remotely approached, in the American theatre it should not be difficult to see with half an eye that the thing that counts with the playgoer is well tuned sentiment sprinkled with laughs. And, of course, that is just what you get in large portions in "Lightnin'." And how you like it; you wipe away your tears and beg for more. At this late hour there is little the reviewer can do but accept the popular decision, advise his readers to see the comedy at once and enjoy the nicest single evening ever found in a theatre.

Conventional as it may be in design, "Lightnin'" has the double advantage of an engaging story and a highly artistic presentation. Lightnin' Bill Jones will live through the generation as the most appealing character the stage has known. Shiftless, rum-soaked and generally useless, old Bill is withal a kindly soul, and his human tenderness, so adroitly drawn by Mr. Pollock, stirs your emotions as few creations of the stage have succeeded in doing.

HUMAN CHARACTER.

"Lightnin'" was born in the brain of Frank Bacon and he carried the idea many years before reducing it to manuscript, which was finally done with the help of Winchell Smith. The role of Bill Jones, made into a living, human character by Bacon himself, may have imposed a hard task on Percy Pollock. It is fair to believe that Pollock must have been deeply impressed with the night's responsibilities, but there was no sign of it in his performance. He played as if he had been doing the role for months.

Supporting Mr. Pollock with more than average strength was Thomas Mackenzie, who was in rare form as the judge in the court scene; Jane Oakes, a simpering delight as a member of the divorce colony, and Jessie Pringle, who had to carry a woman's burden as the wife of Bill Jones. James Rennie, Paul Stanton and Grace Perkins also shared in the artistic merits of the performance.

You'll laugh with Lightnin' Bill, and you'll not be ashamed to shed a tear for him.

BOWDOIN SQ. THEATRE—It was a happy Christmas Day throng that gathered at the Bowdoin Sq. Theatre to enjoy "Skin Deep," a Thomas H. Ince picture, with Milton Sills and Florence Vidor in the leading roles.

SCOLLAY SQ. OLYMPIA—Never has Constance Talmadge been seen to better advantage than in "East is West," which opened its engagement at Gordon's Scollay Sq. Olympia.

CENTRAL SQ. THEATRE—Audiences at Gordon's Central Square Theatre in Cambridge found an enlarged vaudeville program. Five vaudeville acts were on the bill, in line with a new policy of program expansion. The feature film for the first three days and nights this week is "Singed Wings," with Bebe Daniels and Conrad Nagel.

BOSTON THEATRE—Lady Diana Manners in "The Glorious Adventure," the feature at the Boston Theatre, is the first prizma color feature photoplay to be shown in this city. It is a thrilling story of pirates and nobility brought out in full color. The Elm City Four headed the vaudeville program, and other acts included Mazie Lunette and Walton and Brant which, with a new Clyde Cook comedy and a news reel, completed the bill.

HOWARD ATHENAEUM—The burlesque known as the "Pepper Pots" company furnished fun at the old Howard. The comedy element was handled by Charley Goldie and Charles "Red" Marshall, and much interest was centered in the dashing chorus.

OLYMPIA ACQUIRES CODMAN SQ. THEATRE

The Codman Square Theatre in Dorchester, after January 1, will be another link in the chain controlled by Olympia Theatres, Inc.

This big, finely equipped theatre will be under personal supervision of Nathan H. Gordon, president of the corporation operating the theatres included in the Olympia system.

Two performances will be given daily. The photoplay part of the program will include two feature pictures. Vaudeville, made up of high class acts, will be presented Saturdays and Sundays in addition to the photoplay and musical features.

'LIGHTNIN' GETS KEY OF CITY

GREETINGS TO BOSTON

It isn't very often that "lightnin'" strikes the Mayor's office the day after Christmas.

It did today, however, in the form of "Lightnin' Bill Jones." With him was John Golden, the producer.

The Mayor presented Mr. Golden a key to the city, wished him further success in his undertakings and complimented him on the class of shows that he is presenting to the public.

Mr. Pollock's portrayal of the part of "Lightnin' Bill Jones," made famous by the late Frank Bacon, received its initial performance in Boston last night.

BIG HOLIDAY BILL PLEASES AT KEITH'S

With the famous Vincent Lopez Orchestra and May Wirth's spectacular circus novelty featuring the bill at Keith's this week is excellent entertainment. A capacity holiday house found it so.

May Wirth and family perform startling circus equestrian stunts, not only with agility but with the grace of classic dancers. "Phil," Miss Wirth's leading partner, lives up to his description as the world's greatest riding comedian.

Appearing on a Boston stage for the first time, the Vincent Lopez Orchestra, with Dell Lampe as conductor, promises to convince Bostonians that it is the greatest number of its kind on the vaudeville stage.

It, and W. C. Roberts, equilibrists in dress suits, opened the bill with some entertaining stunts. Mason and Shaw have a nifty little singing, dancing and talking act with the champion tomboy of America in the leading role.

Billy Chase and Charlotte La Tour, with Nell Elsing and Scott Moore assisting, present a comical cross section of life and love on the street corner. Miss Elsing deserves special mention. Helen Higgins and Natalie Bates, with Horace Bentley, made a hit in their number, "Slingdance."

The other numbers were up to Keith's standard, including the irresistible Frances Arms in a pleasing series of song types; Harry Mayo, baritone; Fyodo and Anthony, Italian comedians; Jimmy Savo, assisted by Joan Franzi; Pathe News, Topics of the Day and Aesop's Fables.

MAJESTIC HAS CLASSY SHOW THIS WEEK

Love, laughter, human interest, song, story, dance and plenty of it—what more could one ask of a miniature presentation of a Broadway success?

Yet all these elements which go to make a show a hit were there in good proportion in "The Rose Girl," which opened at the Majestic Theatre to a capacity audience. The audience were quick to see it and appreciate the work of the actors, and as a result the audience really got more than was originally prescribed for in the manuscripts.

The sweet heroine and prima donna, the good-looking hero who rescues his beloved one from the imprisoned gardens, the man who supplies the humor, the girl who works with him and dances and sings with him, and the rest of the complications. That's the show, embellished with costume, pretty girls, many more songs, dances, novelties and lest we forget, Shep Camp and Louise Simon, the "small and the fat" of it.

Much credit is due Lelie Romer, "the heavy weight," Hattie Althoff, Harry Coleman, Ione Wilber, Grant Kimbell, George Libbey, Ida May Sparrows and Jerome Bruner for making the production the finished product that it is.

SNAPPY COMEDY AT THE ST. JAMES

"Johnny Get Your Gun," a snappy, lively comedy in three acts by Edmund Lawrence Burke, was presented by the Boston Stock Company at the St. James Theatre before a large and appreciative audience.

This play by Mr. Burke is one of the most successful ones he has written. The scene is laid in a motion picture studio out west and in a country house in Long Island. The performance was generally excellent and the audience displayed many evidences of satisfaction.

Stellar honors go to Walter Gilbert, who takes the part of Johnny Wiggins, the wild and woolly western cowboy, who impersonates a friend in order to save the friend's sister from marrying a duke, and is thrown into high society in New York.

POPULAR NOVEL ON SCREEN AT ORPHEUM

"Quincy Adams Sawyer," a screen version of the popular novel of the same name, which established the fame of its author, Charles Felton Pidgin, was received with enthusiasm at Loew's Orpheum Theatre. In its film form, it proved a highly interesting piece of work, exciting, humorous and extraordinarily well played. In the cast are Blanche Sweet, Barbara La Marr, June Elvidge, Lon Chaney, Elmo Lincoln, John Bowers, Louise Fazenda and Hank Mann. The vaudeville program was headed by Frank W. Stafford, in a woodland fairy tale entitled "Rip Van Winkle's Dream." Others were the Cosmopolitan Dancers, in a spectacular classic; Jones and Sylvester, two popular entertainers; Nestor and Vincent in a novelty sketch; and Marde and Rome, and Gordon and Healy. Larry Semon in "The Counter Jumper" and news pictorial were also shown.

GORDON'S STRAND—Bebe Daniels wears some very beautiful gowns in "Singed Wings," a new Paramount picture in which she and Conrad Nagel are featured at Gordon's Strand Theatre this week. Other attractions include a special holiday picture entitled "Christmas."

Plays That Remain

"The Bat" began its seventeenth week at the Wilbur. Made up principally of fun and excitement.

"Douglas Fairbanks in Robin Hood" has entered its second week at the Park and is settling down for a prosperous run.

* * *

Jackie Coogan in "Oliver Twist" began the fourth week of the engagement at Tremont Temple.

SOMERVILLE PLAYERS IN "THREE TWINS"

That a stock company can show such versatility as did the Somerville Players in their presentation of "The Three Twins" deserves praise and commendation. Miss Helena Morrill, formerly a Boston girl, engaged by Manager McArdis especially for this notable attraction, gave a pleasing interpretation of the leading role. The regular members of the company, including Ann Hamilton, Barry Bond, Rose Mary Hilton, Mrs. George A. Hibbard, Philip Sheffield, Joseph Granby and Halbert Brown, accorded Miss Morrill fine support. Several of the dancing and singing numbers by the members of the company would have done credit to artists specialising in such features. The chorus, augmented for the occasion, was all that could be desired.

GRIPPING PLAY OF LINCOLN'S CAREER

John Drinkwater's "Abraham Lincoln," as presented at the Tremont Theatre, is gripping—superb.

As the play progresses the spectator forgets that he is in a theatre. He goes back to the stirring Civil War days. He lives with Abraham Lincoln and the historical figures which surrounded him.

The noble figure of the Great Emancipator, whom we have learned to love, becomes a real flesh and blood person. History is brought right down the years to us and our respect and love for him are made clearer, closer, more personal.

Frank McGlynn, who has played the role of Lincoln during the four years that the company has been touring the country, in the part is incomparable. He is supported by a cast of actors who make each character stand out, clear, perfect in detail and technique. Round after round of applause greeted the efforts of the players in their presentation of the masterpiece.

The play in historical and fiction, all value is second to none. It is a play that should not be missed by any one.

This is the second appearance here of the play with the same fine company which appeared during its first run.

"HOTTENTOT" AT GORDON'S CAPITOL

"The Hottentot" wins. That was the verdict of audiences at Gordon's Capitol Theatre after seeing the great comedy drama film of that name, with Douglas MacLean and Madge Bellamy. "The Hottentot" is screened from the great racing play, in which Willie Collier appeared with marked success for two seasons.

The Capitol's bill for the holiday week is unusually strong in supplementary film features and music. The screen program is completed with latest educational news and comedy reels. The music includes special selections by the Capitol's twenty-piece Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Hyman Fine, and by Francis J. Cronin at the cathedral tone organ.

"The Hottentot" is also shown this week at Gordon's Olympia, with the usual vaudeville program.

LANCASTER THEATRE — The George Fitzmaurice picturization of Mary Johnston's novel, "To Have and To Hold" is now showing at the Lancaster Theatre. Heading the cast are Bert Lytell and Betty Compson. On the same program Earle Williams is seen in "Restless Souls." The program on Thursday will offer "On the High Seas" and "One Wonderful Night."

FAKE BOSTON DOCTOR PASSES BAD CHECK

A man posing as "Dr. Calkins" of Boston, claiming to be a graduate of the Harvard Medical School fleeced residents of Three Forks, Montana, out of hundreds of dollars by bad checks and ran away with the daughter of a prominent family in that town.

The man, who is known to the police as "Scotty Craven," was arrested with the girl at Bozeman, Montana, and was sentenced to serve four years in State prison at Deer Lodge, Montana. The girl returned to her parents.

"Dr. Calkins," suave of manner and with the appearance of a professional man, came into Three Forks with the story of a blighted romance in Boston, which, he said, he went West to forget. According to his story, he was in his office on Tremont street, near the Tremont Theatre, preparing to leave for his wedding when he received word that his intended bride had eloped with another.

"Dr. Calkins" in some manner was introduced to several homes in Three Forks. At one, the residence of a former citizen of Charlestown, he discussed Boston with his host, showing an intimate knowledge of this city. At the home of another resident of Three Forks he met the girl with whom he eloped that very night. The couple were overtaken by the irate father in Bozeman, thirty miles distant.

The Boston police are looking up his history here.

Mark-Down SALE

of Our Entire Winter Stock of

Suits and Overcoats

Starts Today

Following our long-established custom of effecting a complete clearance at the end of each season so that nothing shall ever grow old on our hands, we've made sharp reductions from prices which were already the lowest to be found anywhere on clothing of equal style, quality and desirability.

(Operating 10 great stores as one brings us extensive price concessions through volume buying. Then we price our goods very low in proportion to cost to produce volume selling. Thus volume of business is our only source of profit. Without big volume and quick turn-over, we lose.)

Everything was new this season, exceptionally attractive, the finest product of the House of Kuppenheimer and other well known makers. So while the price reductions are not sensational in themselves, the values now offered may truly be termed extraordinary.

DESERTED WIFE ENDS HER LIFE

Official records say Mrs. Hillman died from gas poisoning.

Mrs. Hillman followed to Boston after she learned that her husband and [illegible] were [illegible] and leased [illegible] house at No [illegible] St. Botolph street, where she took in roomers to support herself.

Then she settled down to wait for her husband to return. Last July [illegible] strain of hard work and constant brooding and worry brought on a nervous breakdown. For some time previous to Christmas she appeared to grieve more deeply than ever before.

Christmas morning her half brother, Philip Haggard, who roomed at her home, found her. Christmas day held no joy for her.

The official weatherman is trying to figure out whether it will be rain or snow that will fall. He knows it will be one of the two. There is a fair chance that it will hold off until tomorrow. Anyway, tomorrow will be colder with fresh winds.

The moderate temperature of Boston is being felt all over the country today. Not a single spot in the United States where the mercury has dropped to zero or below. The coldest spot in the northwest reported 10 above.

MINISTER BEGS HER TO COME BACK

Youthful Mate, However, Refuses to Heed Ardent Plea of Man She Accuses

Providence, R. I., Dec. 26—Three times Christmas Day Dr. Adolph H. Englehardt knelt in prayer beside his bed in a humble home on Knight street and appealed to the Almighty that his attractive 20-year-old wife, Minnie Colwell Englehardt, return to him and live "happily ever after."

But Mrs Englehardt, safely ensconced within her parents Johnston farm house, apparently heard not the fervent supplications of her middle-aged husband, for she failed to return to the "divine healer." Neither did she send any word that she was ready to forgive him for his alleged relations with 119 women, whom she has named as co-respondents, in her divorce suit.

STILL LOVES WIFE.

"It was the saddest Christmas I ever spent," the "divine healer" told the Boston American. "And although my wife did wrong in deserting me and then bring me these ridiculous charges against me I have forgiven her. I still love her.

That is my Christmas present to her over this Yule holiday, a reaffirmation of my love. Her parents, and her grandmother, will probably not thank me for this Christmas love reaffirmation, but it is nevertheless the best Christmas present I can send her.

"Minnie is so young and sweet, and withal so easily influenced. She certainly has been influenced. I hope and pray that through upon her grandmother. A true prison gossip of one or two more [illegible] But even to the grandmother and these women [illegible] I wish a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year."

CO-RESPONDENTS AT TREE.

Many of the 119 women co-respondents declared it was the worst Christmas they ever spent. This did not, however, deter them reinforced by their husbands from attending the annual children's Christmas tree in the parlors of the Church of the Divine Science.

The divine healer acted as Santa Claus and distributed presents to the youngsters of his flock. Then came games and dances.

And to climax the Christmas tree festivities the women co-respondents [illegible] hands again passed a vote of confidence in the [illegible] pastor.

TAX FIGHT LOST BY AMOSKEAG

Manchester, N. H., Dec. 26—The Board of Tax Assessors today refused to grant the petition of the Amoskeag Manufacturing company for the abatement of $150,000 in taxes against the company. The Amoskeag will probably take the case to court.

Other manufacturers are greatly interested [illegible] as the action [illegible] is to be a test case that may affect tax legislation in the State.

'IF I REST I DIE, SARAH ASSERTS WINNING FIGHT

Paris, Dec. 26 (By Associated Press)—The condition of Sarah Bernhardt showed further improvement today and her physicians said that they tentatively considered her out of danger.

This asserted that if the actress' remarkable recovery continued there was a possibility that she might [illegible] appear in the new dramatic play [illegible] Night.

[illegible] it was taken with a [illegible] during a dress rehearsal [illegible] suffered a relapse on Sunday.

It seemed almost as though that grave which medical men said yesterday was necessary to save the life of the "Divine Sarah" had happened.

SON IS HOPEFUL.

Discussing his mother's condition, Maurice Bernhardt told the Associated Press:

"We believe she is out of danger, although at the moment it is unsafe to make predictions. She is completely recovered. All her theatrical plans necessarily are out of the question for a long time.

"When she has had a complete rest for many weeks, our doctors say, but to this she is reported to have said:

"Rest? I can't rest—if I did, I would die."

"MUST ACT OR DIE"

For her part she also one of the biggest problems is to keep Bernhardt a mile off the theatre. She has said repeatedly that, if she could not act she would be sure to die.

Cable messages and telegrams have been received today from many countries including the United States, expressing sympathy and hope for the recovery of Madame Bernhardt.

FRANKIE MASON, UNDEFEATED CHAMPION, ASSAILS VILLA

TITLE HOLDER TO FIGHT WILDE IN ENGLAND

By JACK CONWAY.

Frankie Mason has stepped out of the woods and slapped Poncho Pancho Villa across the face with this question

"What do you mean when you say you are the American flyweight champion?"

A fine greeting for the day after Christmas.

And Villa hesitates, stammers, moves around uneasily pushes his hands into his pockets and then replies:

"I knocked Johnny Buff out in eleven rounds."

And Mason laughs. It is one of those mean, contemptuous laughs that cuts more than left jabs and right hand thrusts.

Villa stammers some more and finally asks Manager Frank Churchill to do the explaining

Villa is in much the same position as the man who married the supposed widow of a dead soldier. At the crucial moment the dead soldier returns to life, says the War Department made an error in reporting his death and asks:

Jimmy Wilde

"What are you doing with my brainstorm?"

Villa has been entrenched upon the championship throne for several months He loves the honors that goes with a championship. Also the large purses and the attention of the promoters.

And just when the old place is beginning to look like home along comes Mason with an impertinent question that upsets everything.

"What do you mean when you say you are the American flyweight champion?"

And immediately Villa is more dazed than he was at any time during his ring career

"I am the American flyweight champion," says Mason "I won the title in a fair fight and have never been defeated at weight. Get away from those facts IF YOU CAN."

Villa seizes a record book, hastily turns its pages with a nervous hand, and finds every word uttered by Mason to be true.

Frankie Mason, American born, has never been defeated in a contest for the American flyweight championship.

True, Frankie has lost to some of our world's leading bantamweights. But when he has opposed the flyweights—the little fellows from 110 to 112 pounds—it has been a different story. He has smashed his way to glorious victories.

Mason got tired of eating away weight So he retreated to a lumber camp in the Middle West For months he has been busy building up his constitution by chopping down trees and doing other rough work. He has made himself as hard as the proverbial nails He has cut out three pounds—he now scales at 112—but he is stronger and tougher than he has been at any time during his career

The American champion was tickled foolish when he discovered that there are now real flyweights whom he can battle.

"It will feel peculiar battling little fellows like Villa and Genaro" said Mason.

"I defeated most of the bantamweights and so shouldn't have a great deal of trouble winning over flyweights," he continued.

"As American flyweight champion—a titleholder who standforth undefeated—I plan to invade England and little Jimmy Wilde for the world's title. I have received a $15,000 offer from a London promoter for a match with Wilde.

"I am the American champion, Wilde the world's titleholder. Therefore a match between Wilde and myself should be about the biggest kind of a ring attraction.

"After my tussle with Wilde I plan to return to this country and will be perfectly willing to meet Villa, Genaro or any of the other little men of repute."

The return of Mason has had the same effect upon Villa and Genaro as the world has if you've been a bonehead at the centre of a Sunday school picnic

And the old record books back up Mason. He is the American flyweight champion. Furthermore he has proved his mettle in battles with bantamweights. It would be a rare treat to see this brill ant little fight the machine in a contest with an opponent of his own weight

Meanwhile, Wilde, Villa and Genaro have cause for worry.

Paris, Dec. 26.—A dispatch to the Herald from Monte Carlo says that Mlle. Suzanne Lenglen will play an exhibition tennis match on Saturday morning. Detroit Invites Gonzaga

New York, Dec. 26.—Another foot ball fixture is planned for New York next season University of Detroit has invited Gonzaga to come East next fall. It is planned to play the game at the Polo Grounds.

BOWMAN LEADS THE EASTERN BATTERS

Elmer Bowman of the New Haven club was the real leader in batting in the Eastern League last season, according to the averages compiled by Leslie R Stearns, league statistician. Bowman hit .365 for 152 games. Starr of Bridgeport hit .445 but took part in only 18 games. Jim Thorpe of the Worcester team was next to Bowman with .344 for 94 games.

Henry Lavalle of Worcester hit .329 for 145 games, while Eddie Hayes of New Haven, who will manage the Worcester team next season, batted for .330 and was fifth on the list

Marty Shay, New Haven shortstop, who was bought by the Worcester team recently, batted .309 and was eleventh on the list.

Advice Is for the Open Stance for Drive

The stance should be comfortable and at the start of the swing the weight of the body is evenly balanced on both feet.

As the club head is taken back the right knee stiffens and the weight is shifted slightly to the left leg. The left hip and the left knee are turned in toward the ball, as the left heel is raised a little.

All these things should be done together—not disjointly. This action is called the pivot.

McGRAW ELECTED CLUB PRESIDENT

By CHARLES A. TAYLOR

New York, Dec. 26.—John J. McGraw will start the New Year as president, as well as manager, of the New York National League club Charles A. Stoneham, who has served as club executive of the Giants since they were bought from the estate of the late John T Bush, five years ago will remain as principal stockholder in the club, but will turn the conduct of affairs over to McGraw.

No more fitting testimonial as to the high eminence McGraw has attained in the world of baseball could be given than his selection as supreme controller of the destinies of the most prosperous and successful club in the major leagues

McGraw came to New York twenty years ago after selling the club in Baltimore, because of continual wrangling with Ban Johnson head of the American League, to which Baltimore then belonged. The fiery leader found baseball here a complete wreck, with Horace Fogel the then manager of the Giants trying to make a first baseman out of Christopher Mathewson.

Franchise and players together wouldn't have brought a song

But McGraw poured a fortune into the pockets of John T. Brush He poured another into those of Charles A. Stoneham, and made himself fairly well off in the bargain.

Eight pennants and three world's series is the mark set by McGraw for the playing end of the game.

Frank Chance's Story of Return to Baseball

By FRANK L. CHANCE,

New Manager Boston Red Sox, Former Peerless Leader of Champion Chicago Cubs.

In the past two weeks I have been asked, at least a thousand times, if and why I was returned to baseball. After an absence of eight years from the big league game, my reappearance seems to surprise the fan in general.

Thinking things over, it occurs to me that there are two very distinct reasons in my particular case

First, the love of the game that becomes part of the nature of anybody who has participated in and enjoyed it as I have

Second I feel that I have a certain justification coming to me from major league ball

It's easy for any old time ball player to look back the past, [illegible] extol the setting of his triumphs After the playing days are over [illegible] somewhere in the game, to having a part of it still to play on

Lotta May Discourses on Cats and Their Lady Owners

By Jack Casey.

"IT'S the kittens meow to me," said Lotta May Pepper, "how these dames what has nothin to do has the nerve to get up a cat show an' then pose for photographs with the critters almost ou'a sight and the photo lookin like an ad for silk stockings."

Lotta traced a ruby line on her pouty lips with her cosmetic pencil, while Sam the De Luxe Apartments Extraordinary janitor, leaned on his mop handle.

"It suah am the possum's ear muffs," said Sam. "An I wishes I had some of their jack, that's all."

"You said it," said Lotta. "that's all they has got sense and time. Believe me, I wish I had some."

"Just what would you get with all that dough, Miss Pepper?" inquired Sam with a smile.

"I'd get me furs the softest, most snuggy furs you ever"——

"Ha, ha, ha," laughed Sam. "What's the matter?" asked Lotta indignantly.

"That's ... grand Sam, 'what's furs it they ain't sam-ed cats."

Lotta was framing a terse reply when the lift descended and out stepped Mrs. Ampledough of the seven thousand-dollar suite on the seventh floor.

"Good morning, Sam, good morning, Miss Pepper," said Mrs. Ampledough, as she strode forth like a majestic, decorated cruiser. "I suppose you read in the papers about my dear little Rajah capturing the silver cup? Yes, deedy Little Rajah, here you tinning thing, show yourself." And from the interior of a gorgeous ermine muff Mrs. Ampledough drew out a fluffy white ball.

"Isn't he just the tannin-est thing?" she gurgled. "Don't you just lub him, Samuel? Here see Samuel here an' little Miss Pepper furman."

Miss Pepper was on her feet in a bounce. "Isn't he just too sweet. Oh, Mrs. Ampledough, he's just too beautiful."

"He suah am," from Sam. "He sure am the most beautifullest cat. He ain't no wild cat, is he Mrs. Ampledough?"

"Of course not" from Lotta with indignation. "You know, Mrs. Ampledough I so wanted to go to the cat show but I had a cold and I was afraid——"

"Of course, my dear, that was very thoughtful. It would never have done to expose darling Rajah to germs. And she swept toward her waiting motor.

"Well did you get that, Sam? The very idea tellin' me it was thoughtful of me not to expose her Raj——

"That suah was funny," grinned the ebony Samue. "I noticed that——

"Germs, the idea," said Lotta. "That's what I get for makin' believe I like cats when I hate 'em. Germs! Huh, why that little beast ain't nothing but a germ with hair on. Yes this is the De Luxe. Just a moment."

HIGHBROW ESSAYS

By Joy Sutherland.

PRUNES.

PRUNES are small, stoop-shouldered atrocities which perished in the dim, distant past from malnutrition, the mummies of which are served up by malicious and mean boarding houses to boarders who have long since lost their sense of self-respect.

Prunes consist of a thin wrinkled skin which looks like a relief map of Switzerland, and a dark, questionable interior which tastes like a blend of quinine and castor oil and which ought to be prohibited by a legislative committee.

For years leading economists have been working on the mystery of why restaurants are so anxious to serve prunes. They cost more than other similar dishes, yet they always head the list of desserts. But the answer has been found. The restaurateurs follow the theory that, if a customer is filled full of prunes he will not have the physical courage to kick about the size of the check.

Apache Indians were the first to realize the possibilities of the prune. Before going on the warpath each brave filled a sack with the dried fruit and slung it across his shoulder. After having subjected their prisoners to all other forms of punishment, the prunes were administered internally as a final agony.

DON'T YOU, TOO?

By J. J. Leibson

I remember, I remember
The house where I was born,
It hadn't worn a coat of paint
Since Samson's locks were shorn
You ought to see that shanty now
So bright in borrowed charms!
A doorman guards its portals with
It's called The Crocus Arms.

I remember, I remember
The rent we used to pay;
The landlord charged us just enough
To keep his horse in hay.
But since he's learned to profiteer
He keeps no horse, you bet;
He runs a car up to the rent
Of room and kitchenette.

I remember, I remember
The wages father got,
He piled down forty bucks a week
And it was quite a lot.
He used to smoke a lavalier,
He smoked and sometimes drank,
Yet twenty bucks was all he spent
And ten went in the bank.

I remember, I remember
The dresses mother wore;
She owned in three years only one
That barely missed the floor.
The stately style of modern dame
Would grieve a noble queen;
But how the dress that grandma wears
Would suit our little Jean.

Medbury Says Women Like Nervous Breakdowns as They Leave No Scars

By John P. Medbury

1922 [illegible] a way to say that a lot of people haven't had their nervous breakdown yet.

OF course some of them will probably wait until later on and then be a complete wreck

THERE'S no sense in being ill if you can't devote a lot of time to it

WHEN a woman "goes to pieces" she wants to have plenty of leisure in which to enjoy it

BEING married while you're sick takes all the fun away from it.

IT'S no use to be miserable if you've got other things on your mind

ONE woman said if she couldn't get the most happiness out of her illness she'd rather be well

THE average dame had to go to the hospital in 1922 in order to have something to talk about in 1923.

SHE realized that nobody likes to listen to warmed-over operations

OF course most people like to have nervous breakdowns because they don't leave any scars

BESIDES the average woman enjoys being miserable at the seashore.

AND if she was operated on she'd have a hard job getting a bathing suit where the stitches wouldn't show

BUT you can have nervous debility and wear as low a cut evening gown as you want.

IT'S necessary for people to go to the seashore with a nervous breakdown - otherwise the hotel owners would have one.

BUT from the prices they charge some of guests it's hard to decide which ones have the worst case of nerves

SOME of the resorts are so expensive that you can go there healthy and come away sick

YOU may not look a skeleton, but you'll have to rattle the bones at the end of the week

SO if you haven't had your nervous breakdown yet you'd better hurry up and "go to pieces" this Winter, because they raise their rates in the Summer

SOME people act as if work might be a contagious disease.

THE VALUE OF A WORD.

An oft repeated word is bound to make an impression on the mind.

It is well to have some inspiring motto always before you.

When that word is also written many times daily and is seen in bold print in a certain spot every day, a greater impression is made.

Whether the person be conscious of it or not, the imprint of the thought which a word ever present leaves is bound to bear fruit in time.

As an example, two unpretentious business blocks in a small city were located on the corners of Main street and a little side street, an alley, in what strangers called it. But the alley was named "PROGRESS STREET."

The men who were engaged in business in those corner stores and offices had that word Progress, ever before them.

The town was a hundred years old and an up to date hotel, and industries were needed. Who thought of them and finally succeeded in making a regular boom town of that city.

Men who daily turned the corner and had Progress in the location of Main and Progress streets.

Several million dollars' worth of plans have come to be real things for untold benefit to that place, because the leaders in the movements for growth and improvement had "Progress" before them every day.

Indeed Not

De Style—Mamie, is school teachers really have their hair bobbed.

MAN WITH TWO LOVES

Jess Sends a Letter by Mistake, and Dorrie Declares That the Way to Handle Men Is to Show an Independent Spirit

By Ruth Logan

DORRIE went across the room and put her arm about her roommate.

"Don't cry, Anne. No man is worth it. Give him the bad hour he deserves. Don't go home at Christmas. Come home with me. Mother will be so glad. She has always wanted to see you. Then you can go home the day after Christmas and see your father and mother. I'll show you the way to handle men is to show them that you have some spirit. Jess thinks you'll come home sweet as pie and go to the Christmas dance with him and that you'll let him offer you a dozen apologies and accept them."

"LOOK, ANNE, THERE MUST BE FROM JESS DID HE KNOW YOU WERE COMING HERE TO—"

Anne Durand looked up from her writing desk where she had been penning a letter to the man in question and nodded her head. "I'll do it, Dorrie. It will serve him right. How would you feel if you received a letter intended for another girl. I've a notion never to meet an it to Jess at all. Whom on earth do you suppose he calls sweetheart?"

For the tenth time Dorrie read the letter that Jess had sent to Anne by mistake.

"He's a scoundrel," said Dorrie, "and I'd like to have a good talk with him. Perhaps the other girl will send back your letter and he will have to explain."

Consequently, Christmas Eve found Dorrie and Anne alighting at the station in Holdane, a small rural fared wonder in her middle forties rushed up and cl circled both girls in her arms. "Welcome, Anne," she said warmly. "I came to meet you because Teddy brought a college friend home with him and they are skating this afternoon. They have arranged a nice evening for you girls—a dance at the Tyler Hall and it is going to be very gay. Let's hurry so you can rest a bit after dinner. You must be tired out."

Dorrie was brushing her hair at the dressing table and suddenly she bent forward and lifted a note addressed to Miss Durand. "Look, Anne, this must be from Jess. Did he know you were coming here? It is post-marked from Deland."

"That isn't Jess' writing," gasped Anne as she ran a finger under the flap of the envelope. Two letters fell out and she read the first one eagerly

"Dear Anne:

"I have waited to give you this letter at holiday time, but your mother tells me you have changed your mind about coming home and have gone to your chum's instead. Perhaps this will make your Christmas happier. Jess is a very unhappy boy and it seems that you do not trust him. I have convinced him, however, that almost any girl would feel just as you do.

"You see, my dear, I am trying not to be jealous of the little girl who has really not robbed me of a thing but who has surely found her own place in my boy's heart.

"Lovingly,

"MARY H. HOLLAND"

"Oh, Anne," cried Dorrie, "it was all right all the time, and I'm responsible for the wretched night you will have. I'm going to get Ted and whoever he has brought home with him to drive us all over to Deland." And with that she rushed out into the hall calling for her brother.

UNEXPECTED MEETING.

He came out from his room and lifted her from her feet. "And, Dorrie, I want you to meet Jess Oh, Jess!" he called back into the room, "come here."

At the same moment that Jess made his appearance Anne's head was thrust out into the corridor

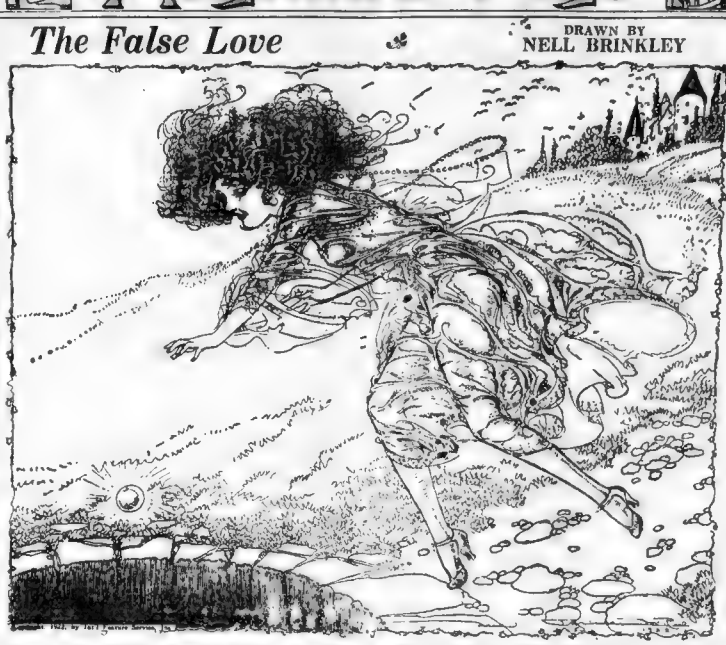
Ted was grinning boyishly. "Now this is what comes of girls having brothers in whom they confide. As soon as Dorrie wrote me about your trouble Miss Durand, I immediately got in touch with Jess. Never saw him until today—didn't chum with him at college as you were led to believe —just rode out and asked him to spend the holidays with us, since his fiance was going to be our guest."

"Oh you are wonderful," cried the happy girl. "You dear, good people! And how perish I am! My parents are in Europe, and Jess' mother is all alone."

"That's fixed, too" said Ted. "Well go to the dance tonight and tomorrow we'll drive over to Deland. It will be a happy Christmas!" And Ted drew his sister down the hall and left Anne and Jess alone

The False Love

DRAWN BY NELL BRINKLEY



IN an old fairy tale there was a beautiful Princess very fair and good and gentle, a dreamy little Princess with golden hair like the sun on gold dust, NOT bobbed then, my dear, but falling over her shoulders in ringlets and wreathed with pink roses—with eyes of hare-bell blue, lily-fingers, dancing feet and a trusting heart

And her wicked step-mother, locking herself in a tower-room, and muttering there chanting strange tunes there, making weird signs there, reading out of a black book, drawing circles around herself and mixing queer potions that smoked black and ugly there, made out of magic a golden ball and brought it downstairs with her.

A golden ball that would roll, of itself ahead of you, like a live thing, a ball that glittered and shone in the sun

It seemed whether she would or not, that the little Princess must follow; her velvet feet flew, her hair was on the wind like a pennant, she reached with her little white hands she bent lower, as the ball kept just ahead—bouncing, leaping just ahead of her finger tips. And then—at the little Princess' feet a back pit lay—the ball leaped into it flashing, and after it fell the poor little royal maiden with a last flicker of tiny slippers and gold-embroidered gown, with a last wave of a white hand like a wisp of foam in the sea. And the step-mother saw only a black pit and went back to the palace garden laughing up her brocade feet and a trusting heart

Well, of course, you know how it turned out all right She came up to the world again, to be happy ever after, when a Prince, who was so good and true-hearted that all things were clear to him, so that he could see into the land beyond the blackness of the pit-bottom as he knelt above and gazed down

And that is the same story that the modern little Princess, who writes, or "sells," or reads a t, p writer, or stays "in home" and helps her mother, lived who finds her first love, so shining and golden a delusion and a blackness after. And if she'll only believe it—that is her ending too. She will swim up to the world again to be happy ever after, when the real Prince with the true heart and the clear vision comes along —NELL BRINKLEY

WHEN A GIRL MARRIES

Ann Finds Mr. Haldane and Irma Warren at the Club, Tom West Having Also Invited Them to Dinner

By Ann Lisle

IT was all in such a breathless whirl there was time for little more than Tom's declaration that he hoped I was as well satisfied with the chaperone he'd provided as with the one I'd suggested

"CHAPERONES? I HAD BLANKLY ON YES; OF COURSE"

"Chaperone? I said blankly "Oh, yes; of course" mumbled

It really won't do for me to be taking even my best friend's wife out to dinner," said Tom smoothly "You were right in your attitude when you wouldn't even lunch with me unchaperoned"

"But I didn't know you then," I said, forbearing to add, "nor trust you"

"Of course you didn't I didn't even know myself but now that you understand how much I care for old Jimmie you might easily enough waive formality and dine with me. Only now I have to see things through Irma's eyes and also from the viewpoint of old Loren Haldane. He approves of you. His approval of me is due to go on a notch when he observes our friendship and sees just how free it is from any modern philandering element."

"Um, Tom!" I cried. "If you expect to win Loren Haldane's regard I must be on an honest basis. He's fine and high minded. At least he knows the difference between what's called proper and what is really right"

"Here we are," said Tom with no abatement of the elaborate smugness with which he was going to give me a lesson, so it was hard to resist.

Mr. Haldane and Irma Warren were sawing for us in the club Their greetings were so warm and simple that I found my resentment smoothed out without leaving a wrinkle in my mental quality And like a flash it came to me that the fine old gentleman might be sent by Jimmie to help me with my problem

As we sat down to our table Mr. Haldane turned to me with something almost wistful in his manner

It is a great joy to an old man like me to find that the young people are willing to have him help, he said

"Willing, sir!" interrupted Tom a shade too emphatical for delicacy "Friend is the word

Irma beamed. It was plain that she felt her boys were getting on famously. I detected a sense of weighing and finding wanting in the fact that it was again to me, Loren Haldane made his reply

"You young people are very—charming," he remarked "But when a man is so old that he has to retire from active participation in his life work, he's likely to be dead weight at parties."

"You don't mean you're leaving down the reins at Haldane's!" I cried, going straight to the main issue as I felt Mr. Haldane wished.

"I'm giving them into capable hands. Tomorrow night you must dine with me." His eyes swept the board, making his invitation inclusive. "The dinner will be to celebrate a double event—the return of my young friend, Carl Booth, and his bride—and his taking over of Haldane's"

I felt my breath catch in my throat. I dared not look at Tom

So this is how he's to meet Daisy Condon again.

From the moment when Mr. Haldane revealed that he'd given over the management of Haldane's to Carl Booth, Tom was so uneasy that I wondered how it could escape anyone's attention. His stumbling reply to the invitation to meet Carl and his bride at dinner the next evening was enough to betray him to any but the simple minded, of course But little Irma Warren is the least suspicious of beings, and Loren Haldane's business shrewdness doesn't lead him to suspect his friends of ulterior motives

By Jove! I'm sorry you're going training for Booth tomorrow night cried Tom, overstressing it again "You see, since Mrs Booth left my shop, I'm minus the cleverest assistant I've ever had. I'd fallen into the way of counting on her She's a young woman of rare good taste So now I'm scheduled to take a buying trip she would once have managed for me. And I leave in the morning

Can't you postpone it one day? ventured Irma "Then a motor coming and going for us and let her join our business. You ought to be welcoming Mrs Booth

Perhaps I am going wrong, but more we were sure the satisfaction of knowing that I can't be at my dinner—just because it's on her account I hear it replied Tom trying for a light note "You see I'm bearing it like a brick it may help me to get a raise in my salary. Then I can afford to come home for a visit"

That's so. I'm glad you've decided sweetly. You don't have to work hard, don't you? When I have such a big boy he costs a considerable sum. I'm all the happier because Uncle is going to have a little playtime

I must reach my office so much if I didn't have a dear child to see that it's full of gas events" said Mr Haldane with his quiet smile. "I'll be on the job for a time myself, I suppose, with the magazine and I look forward to the day when I can turn it over to a young man I've said as a son—and a son who's a modern improvement on the old model. Hallowell's been a fine man in many a long enough

He chuckled a bit for very pride in Carl, and Irma and I knew better than to protest. But Tom awkwardly trying to say the right thing—stumbled into the wrong one.

THE RHYMING OPTIMIST

By ALINE MICHAELIS

WHEN Bill was living close at hand the neighbors laughed at him. He could not learn to till the land like Jonathan or Jim. His crops were only middling good, his fields would plainly show Bill never fully understood the way to make things grow. In spite of all their sage advice, each day he'd putter 'round on some new-fangled fool device for stirring up the ground. Yes, he'd neglect to go to meals while working on the thing, a mass of pivots, bolts and wheels, with steering gear and spring. At last his oatfields petered out, likewise his turnip beds, till neighbors looked at him in doubt, and said, "I shook their heads. Said they: "It must seem bad to see the poorhouse just ahead; but that is where Bill Smith will be are many months have sped. His Pa and Ma were both O. K., smart folks and workers too. We can't see how Bill gets this way." It makes his friends feel blue." But one day Billy went to town and parented his plow. It brought him money and renown, and he's a king-pin now. He has a Florida estate, a mountain bungalow and all his old friends think he's great and say "We told you so!"

Am a man over 70 and for some time past had found myself failing faster, and in ways other than my age alone would seem to account for. Had tried various medicines which seemed to benefit me for a time, but inevitably caused a relapse. Happened to see an advertisement of Wincarnis, and thought I'd try once more. HOW TO FORGET TROUBLES

TROUBLES knock up your system like Jack Dempsey knocks down his opponent.

Troubles deal blows both in the head and stomach—and they hurt the stomach more than they do the head!

Troubles give the stomach indigestion, slow up the liver—and then follow constipation and biliousness.

The way to get rid of troubles is to invigorate digestion, stimulate liver and bowels and tone up the entire system. The best way to do this—has been for the past 80 years—is to take Beecham's Pills.

Then you will feel so good that "troubles" become merely problems, to be solved readily by the clear, keen brain of health.

THE PRIDE OF PALOMAR By PETER B. KYNE

An Engrossing Story of Southern California by the Author of "Kindred of the Dust"

Don Mike struggles with Loustalot and gives him a thrashing

START THIS NEW STORY TODAY

The story opens on the Rancho Palomar, an extensive tract in Southern California. It is the estate of the Farrels, an ancient California family dating back to the days of the Spanish conquistadores, and enlivened with a dash of Irish.

Old Don Miguel Farrel, alone on the heavily mortgaged rancho with only his last faithful retainer, Pablo Artelan, and the latter's expansive wife, receives a telegram from the War Department at Washington announcing the death in battle in Siberia of his only son, "Don Mike."

False news, as the subsequent scene at the Presidio army fields show where "Don Mike" is mustered out of the service. On the train, homeward bound, he encounters a party of three—an overbearing, wealthy Japanese, a prosperous-appearing American with a down-East accent, and the latter's beautiful daughter. He has dinner with the daughter. Don Mike leaves the train at Gespe and walks home, discovering the grave of his father. Kay Parker arrives at the ranch and tells Pablo Don Mike is not dead. Don Mike arrives and takes charge. He tells the Parkers they may stay as his guests. Don Mike meets his father's enemy and thrashes him. He then drives with Kay to El Toro to attach Loustalot's bank account on an old debt of Don Miguel's.

It is a Cosmopolitan Production, direction of Frank Borzage, and featuring Forrest Stanley and Marjorie Daw. It is released as a Paramount picture.

"AS I explained to you this morning, Mr. Okada," he began, "our deal has become a trifle complicated by reason of the wholly unexpected return of Mr. Miguel Farrel.

"Very great misfortune," Okada sympathized. "Very great disappointment."

Mr. Parker favored him with a look of violent dislike and deported abruptly, much to Okada's relief. Immediately he drew his chair close to Parker's.

"You sink Mr. Farrel perhaps can raise in one year the money to redeem property?" he demanded.

"I haven't the slightest information as to his money-raising ability, other than the information given me by that man Pablo has just locked up. If, as Loustalot informed me, Farrel has a judgment against him, he is extremely liable to raise a hundred thousand or more today, what with funds in bank and about fifteen thousand sheep."

"I sink Farrel not very lucky today six sheep, Mr. Parker."

Deal Blocked

"Well, whether he's lucky or not, he has our deal blocked for one year. I can do nothing now until title to this ranch is actually vested in me. I am morally certain Farrel will never redeem the property, but—well, you realize my predicament, Mr. Okada. Our deal is definitely hung up for one year."

"Very great disappointment!" Okada replied sadly. "Next year, I sink California Legislature make new law so Japanese people have very much difficulty to buy land. Attorneys for Japanese Association of California very much frightened because they know Japanese treaty-rights not affected by such law. If my people can buy this valley before that law comes to make trouble for Japanese people, I sank very much better for everybody."

"But, my dear Mr. Okada, I cannot make a move until Miguel Farrel fails to redeem the property at the expiration of the redemption period, one year hence."

"Perhaps that sheep-man kill Mr. Farrel," Okada suggested, hopefully. "I hoping, for sake of Japanese people, that sheeps-man very bad luck for Mr. Farrel."

"Well, I wouldn't care to have him for an enemy. However, I dare say Farrell knows the man well enough and will protect himself accordingly. By the way, Farrel is violently opposed to Japanese colonization of the San Gregorio."

"You sink he have prejudice against Japanese people?"

"I know it, Mr. Okada, and, for that reason, and the further reason that our deal is now definitely hung up for a year, I suggest that you return to El Toro with me this afternoon. I am no longer master here, and I shall be delighted to have you as my guest at the hotel in El Toro while you are making your investigations of the property. I wish to avoid the possibility of embarrassment to you. I am sure you understand our position, Mr. Okada."

The potato baron nodded, scowling slightly.

Mike Looked Back

At a point where the road, having left the valley and climbed a grade to a mesa that gave almost an airplane view of the San Gregorio, Miguel Farrel looked back long and earnestly. For the first time since entering the car, at Kay Parker's invitation, he spoke.

"It's tough it's announced, with conviction, "worth a fight to a finish with whatever weapons come to hand. If I——— By the holy poker! Sheep! Sheep on the Rancho Palomar! Thousands of them. Look! Over yonder!"

"How beautiful they look against those green and purple and gold hillsides," the girl exclaimed.

"Usually, a sheep is not beautiful to a cowman," he reminded her. "However, if those sheep belong to Loustalot, they constitute the fairest sight mine eyes have gazed upon to date."

"And who might he be?"

Open Season

"That shaggy thief I manhandled a few minutes ago. He's a sheep-man from the San Gregorio and for a quarter of a century he has not dared to set foot on the Palomar. Your father, thinking I was dead and that the ranch would never be redeemed after foreclosure of the mortgage, leased the grazing privilege to Loustalot. I do not blame him. I do not think we have more than five hundred head of cattle on the ranch, and it would be a shame to waste that fine green feed." Suddenly the sad and sombre mien induced by his recent grief fled his countenance. He turned to her eagerly. "Miss Parker, if I have any luck worth while today, I think I may win back my ranch."

"I wish you could win it back, Don Mike. I think we all wish it."

"I hope you all do." He laughed joyously. "My dear Miss Parker, this is the open season on terrible practical jokes. I'm no judge of sheep in bulk, but there must be not less than ten thousand over on that hillside, and if the title to them is vested in Andre Loustalot today, it will be vested in me about a month from now.

"I shall attach them; they will be sold at public auction by the sheriff to satisfy in part my father's old judgment against Loustalot, and I shall bid them in—cheap. Nobody in San Marcos County will bid against me, for I am outbid everybody and acquire the sheep without having to put up a cent of capital. Oh, my dear, thoughtful, vengeful old dad! Dying, he assigned that judgment to me and had it recorded. I came across it in his effects last night."

"What are sheep worth, Don Mike?"

"I haven't the slightest idea, but I should say that, by next Fall, those sheep should be worth not less than $6 a head, including the wool-clip. They will begin to lamb in February, and by the time your father dispossesses me a year hence, the increase will amount to considerable. That flock of sheep should be worth about $100,000 by the time I have to leave the Palomar, and I know I'm going to collect at least $50,000 in cash in addition."

He drew from his vest pocket a check for that sum, signed by Andre Loustalot and drawn in favor of John Parker, trustee.

"How did you come by that check?" Kay demanded. "It belongs to my father, so, if you do not mind, Mr. Farrel, I shall retain it and deliver it to my father." Quite deliberately, she folded the check and thrust it into her handbag. There was a bright spot of color in each cheek as she faced him, awaiting his explanation. He favored her with a Latin shrug.

Will Not Accept

"Your father will not accept the check, Miss Parker. Loustalot came to the hacienda this morning for the sole purpose of handing him this check, but your father refused to accept it on the plea that the lease he had entered into with Loustalot for the grazing-privilege of the ranch was now null and void."

"How do you know all this? You were not present."

"No; I was not present, Miss Parker, but—this check is present; those sheep are present; Andre Loustalot was present, then absent, and is now present again. I deduce the facts in the case. The information that I was alive and somewhere around the hacienda gave Loustalot the fright of his unwashed existence; that's why he appropriated that gray horse and fled so precipitately when he discovered his automobile had a flat tire. The scoundrel feared to take time to shift wheels."

"Why?"

"He had the promise of a Farrel that a great misfortune would overtake him if he ever set foot on the Rancho Palomar. And he knows the tribe of Farrel."

"But how did you secure possession of that check, Don Mike?"

"Miss Parker, when a hard-boiled, unconvicted murderer and grass-thief borrows my horse without my permission, and I ride that sort of man down, upset him, sit on him, and choke him, the instincts of my ancestors, the custom of the country, common sense, and my late military training all indicate to me that I should frisk him for deadly weapons. I did that. Well, I found this check when I frisked Loustalot back yonder. And—if a poor bankrupt like myself may be permitted to claim a right, you are not so well entitled to that check as I am. At least, I have the right of discovery."

Check Worthless

"It is worthless until my father endorses it, Don Mike."

"His clear, bold chirography will not add a mile to its value, Miss Parker. Checks by Andre Loustalot on the First National Bank of El Toro aren't going to be honored for some little time. Why? I'll tell you. Because Little Mike the Hustler is going to attach his bank-account this bright April morning."

She laughed happily.

"You haven't wasted much time in vain regret, have you?" she teased him.

"When you start feuding for a living you're a man what hustles, aren't you?"

"Eternal vigilance is the price of liberty." he quoted. "Those sheep weren't visible to us from the floor of the valley; so I take it I was not visible to Loustalot's shepherds from the top of those hills when I redeemed my father's promise to their employer. They'd never suspect the identity of either of us, I dare say. Well, Pablo will hold him incommunicado until I've completed my investigations."

"Why are you incarcerating him in your private bastile, Don Mike?"

"Well, I never thought to profane my private bastile with that fellow, but I have to keep him somewhere while I'm looking up his assets."

"But he may sue you for false imprisonment, kidnaping or—or something."

"Yes, and I imagine he'd get a judgment against me. But what good would that do him? I haven't any assets."

"But you're going to acquire some rather soon, are you not?"

"I'll give all my money to my friend, Father Dominic, to do with as he sees fit. He'll see fit to loan it all back to me."

"But can you hide ten thousand sheep?"

"If that fellow tries to levy on my sheep, I'll shout murder him," Farrel declared. "But we're crossing our bridges before we come to them."

"So we are, Don Mike. Tell me all about this ancient feud with Andre Loustalot."

Cow Thieves

"Certainly. Twenty-five odd years ago, this country was pestered by a gang of petty cow thieves. They'd run lots of from ten to twenty fat steers off the range at a time, slaughter them in El Toro and bury the hides to conceal the identity of the animals —the brands, you understand. The meat they would peddle to butchers in towns along the railroad line. The ringleader owned a slaughter house in El Toro, and, for a long time, nobody suspected him—the cattle were driven in at night.

"Well, my father grew weary of this form of old-fashioned profiteering, and it seemed to him that the sheriff of San Marcos country was too great a simpleton to do anything about it. So my father stood for the office as an independent candidate and was elected on a platform which read, 'No steers taken off this ranch without permission in writing from the owner.' Within six months dad had half a dozen of our prominent citizens in San Quentin Penitentiary; then he resigned the office to his chief deputy, Don Nicolas Sandoval, who has held it ever since.

"Now, during that political campaign, which was a warm and bitter one, Andre Loustalot permitted himself the privilege of libeling my father. He declared in a public address to a gathering of voters in the San Carpojo valley that my father was a crook, the real leader of the rustlers, and merely seeking the office of sheriff in order to protect the cow-thieves. When the campaign ended, my father swore to a warrant charging Loustalot with criminal libel and sued him for one hundred thousand dollars damages.

"A San Marcos County jury awarded my father a judgment in the sum prayed for. Loustalot appealed the case to the Supreme Court, but inasmuch as there wasn't the slightest doubt of his guilt, the higher court affirmed the decision of the Superior Court.

Poor Man Then

"Loustalot was a poor man in those days. He was foreman of a sheep outfit, with an interest in the increase of the flock, and inasmuch as those Basques seldom endure their ends to writing, the sheriff could never satisfy himself that Loustalot had any assets in the shape of sheep. Many ran with the Basque and his employer and all of his Basque friends denied that Loustalot had any assets.

"For twenty-five years, my father has, whenever the statute of limitations threatened to kill the judgment, revived it by having Lustalot upon an order of court to be questioned regarding his ability to meet the judgment; every once in a while my father would sue out a new writ of execution, which would be returned unsatisfied by the sheriff. Six months ago, my father had the judgment revived by due legal process, and, for some reason best known to himself, assigned it to me and had the assignment recorded. Of course, when I was reported killed in Siberia, Loustalot's attorneys naturally informed him that my judgment had died with me unless I had left a will in favor of my father.

"But when my father died-intestate and there were no known heirs, Loustalot doubtless felt that at last the curse had been lifted and probably began doing business in his own name. He's a thrifty fellow and, I dare say, he made a great deal of money on sheep during the war. I hope he has. That old judgment has been accumulating interest at seven per cent. for more than a quarter of a century, and in this state I believe the interest is compounded."

"But why did Loustalot hate your father, sir?" the girl queried.

"We had good fences on our ranch, but somehow those fences always needed repairing whenever Andre Loustalot's flock wandered over from the San Carpojo. In this State, one cannot recover for trespass unless one keeps one's fences in repair—and Loustalot used to trespass on our range quite frequently and then blame his ousedness on our fences. Of course, he broke our fences to let his sheep in to water at our waterholes, which was very annoying to us, because sheep befoul a range and destroy it; they eat down to the very grass-roots, and cattle will not drink at a water-hole patronized by sheep.

"Well, our patience was exhausted at last; so my father told Pablo to put out saltpeter at all of our water-holes. Saltpeter is not harmful to cattle but it is death to sheep, and the only way we could keep Loustalot off our range without resorting to firearms was to make his flock unprofitable. They were. That made Loustalot hate us, and one day, over in the Agua Caliente basin, when Pablo and his riders found Loustalot and his sheep there, they rushed about 800 of his sheep over a rocky cliff and destroyed them a sheer 200 feet into a canon. That started some shooting, and Pablo's brother and one Indian, Juan Galtes, were killed. Loustalot, wounded, escaped on the pack-mule belonging to his sheep outfit, and after that he and my father didn't speak."

"Sylpho-Nathol does its work so well"

"I suppose I'm just one of the many happy housekeepers who are praising Sylpho-Nathol.

"It's such a help. It's so dependable. It's such a positive protection against unpleasant odors and germs.

"I used to think that soap and water and plenty of energy were all that any one needed to keep a house healthfully clean. I never stopped to think of disease germs that took themselves away in cracks and crannies where ordinary means won't budge them. And as for the unpleasant odors that start so easily in sinks and cellars and garbage cans of the best kept homes—I tried to put up with them as necessary evils.

"How different I feel since I've been using Sylpho-Nathol. Fred says that I use it on every square inch of the house. I know that it goes into every pail of mop-water. Sylpho-Nathol is a real germ-destroyer—4½ times stronger than carbolic acid, though the druggist says it is as safe to have in the house as a cake of scouring soap. I pour it down sink drains, because it keeps away the smells such places develop so quickly. I use it in the mop water. I sprinkle it over the garbage every day, because the flies won't come near it. I use it regularly around the bathroom fixtures and as a flush for the closet bowl. Sylpho-Nathol makes a perfectly wonderful sprinkle for damp, dark cellar corners and attic nooks and other places where there is a chance for odors to start or germs to breed."

It's so easy to prepare. A teaspoonful in a quart of warm water makes a clean-smelling, pearly-gray solution that's ready for immediate use.

Sylpho-Nathol comes in four handy sizes, 15c, 35c, 65c, $1.35. Most good grocers and druggists have it. If yours hasn't, he can get it easily. Just ask for it by the name—"Sylpho-Nathol."

FORBES' VIEWS ON FINANCE

—By B. C. Forbes—

I'd rather circulate than comment at present.

My larger duty, well recognized —I'm reminded often enough by readers—is not merely to record events, but to interpret them to sense trends and draw deductions as to what the future promises to bring.

Usually I have rather emphatic views on the outlook. Indeed, at no time since pre-war days have I felt it was superhumanly difficult to gauge what lay ahead.

I confess, however, that for some little time, I've found it impossible to draw definitive conclusions as to what we should prepare for in the second half of next year.

That we will enjoy—or, at least, experience—rather pronounced activity in the early stages of 1923, appears certain.

Stock quotations closed the week four points above the average quotation on December 1, and bonds remained firm throughout the week around the best prices of the month.

* * *

Instead of continuing this kind of chronicle, let me say that I believe the continuance of good times or the advent of poorer times depends on whether or not the Christmas spirit — or its opposite shall prevail. Just what do I mean?

* * *

First there is lacking the Christmas spirit towards industry on the part of the many pronounced radicals who have been elected to Congress.

There is lacking the Christmas spirit towards the railroads by multitudes of shippers and by not a few State railway commissions.

There is lacking the Christmas spirit toward the largest tax payers on the part of many politicians and a large section of the public.

There is lacking the Christmas spirit toward consumers in certain industries whose leaders are marking up prices.

There is lacking the Christmas spirit toward workers, and especially toward labor unions, in many directions where antagonism was emboldened by the surplus of workers.

Were there prevailing throughout the world today, and especially throughout this country, a spirit of helpfulness, tolerance, broad - mindedness, cooperation, were the dominant desire among the politicians, among the agrarian interests, among financial and industrial leaders and among labor leaders to reason together and work together sympathetically and constructively for the broad common good; were the actuating motive of the majority in each group or class, then one would have no hesitation in predicting healthy, active, prosperous conditions in the coming year.

New Highs for Current Year Set in Strong Market Led by Oils and Rails

POND CREEK UP TO FRESH TOP IN NEW YORK

New highs for the current year were set in a strong market in New York led by rails and oils. Money renewed at 4½, then lifted to 5 per cent. Pond Creek Coal was at a fresh top for 1922, up around 4 at 38¼.

Stocks setting fresh 1922 highs included, also, American Metals, Stewart-Speedometer, Stromberg Carburetor, Studebaker and Endicott Johnson. American Metals rose 2 points, Stewart, 3, Stromberg, Studebaker, Phillips Petr. and American sugar were up 2 or better.

Inspired by resistance shown to profit-taking and special liquidation, the bulls bought with fresh confidence in the afternoon, advancing several favorites well beyond the high prices of the morning.

Sugars were especially strong despite the cut in the refined quotation. Exceptions to the general trend were Fisher Body, which was hammered down 9 points, Delaware Lackawana 3 and Vanadium Steel, American Ice, Lorillard Tobacco and Kelsey Wheel 2 points.

Allied Chemical declined to 76½ off 2 from Friday's close, and 4 points below last week's high. Selling was due to disappointment over declaration of the regular dividend, some traders having looked for an increase.

Studebaker during the past week has been bought by traders who expect a large part of the 25 per cent. stock dividend will be quickly made up after it sells ex-dividend Friday.

'THE REAR CAR' A DRAMA OF MYSTERY

Hash is always a dangerous dish for a chef to essay, and that goes for theatrical hash as well as any other.

In "The Rear Car," which saw its metropolitan premier last night at the Selwyn Theatre, Edward E. Rose, the author, served hash. There was a little of "The Cat and the Canary," a bit of "The Bat," a soupcon of "Murders in the Rue Morgue," a trifle of "The Monster," a taste of "Bull Dog Drummond," a dash of "The Last Warning," with large chunks of Taylor Holmes to season the mess.

No fault to find with the seasoning. As for the mess—if you like hash—

No mystery play is complete without what has in the past, for occult reasons, been called "comedy relief." In "The Rear Car" Mr. Holmes himself, in the character of a weird detective who switches from the mild dryness of Porter Robertson to the staccato mannerisms of Harry Clay Blaney, furnishes the bulk of the comedy relief, and does it very well indeed.

Then there is Marguerite Maxwell, to furnish more comedy relief in the character of a "Peg o' My Heart" soubrette who is likable, but in the excitement loses her delicious brogue; and there is James Bradbury, Jr., with more comedy relief in the character of a Pullman porter, which will not be believed by anybody who has ever traveled on a railroad train.

There is also plenty of heart relief. In the trip of the rear car from Los Angeles to Salt Lake City two murders are committed, the train is walled with shutters of steel and a gorilla appears, and many other strange things happen.

Of course, the gorilla isn't really a gorilla. The gorilla is really the—but that would be giving the play away.

MODERN AND BEACON—The bill at the Modern and Beacon Theatres this week shows "Shirley of the Circus," with Shirley Mason in the star player, and the patriotic film, "Yankee Doodle Junior." Also for good measure are shown Larry Semon in "The Counter Jumper" and a news reel.

The Sacramento Chamber of Commerce have perfected arrangements whereby, upon receipt of advance notice of a day or two, any tourist upon arrival at Sacramento will be met at the station with an automobile, and without expense, will be taken for a trip about the city which will include the State Capitol grounds—said to be the most beautiful in the United States; Sutter Fort, some of the old mining towns, gold dredgers in operation and other historical and interesting points in and around California's Capitol.

Tourists desiring to avail themselves of this opportunity of a sightseeing trip without expense should address the Chamber of Commerce, Sacramento, California, being particular to have the advice reach the chamber a day or two in advance of the arrival of the tourists.

Ten of the largest passenger locomotives ever built have just been placed in passenger service on the Boston & Albany Grade Division, pulling "The Scenic Limited." The locomotive is ninety-five feet long and when weight with the tender loaded, is 444,600 pounds. "The Scenic Limited" consists of fifteen standard steel Pullman cars, weighing 600,000 pounds, making the total weight of the train 1,322 tons. The total length of the train is 1,200 feet, only about 200 less than a quarter of a mile. The new engines will be used on the mountain divisions. Fifteen more, of similar size, but of Mallett type, have been contracted for.

IMPROVED SERVICE TO CAROLINA RESORTS.

Beginning January 1 the Seaboard Air Line Railway will inaugurate a line of time which will improve the service for New Englanders who go to Pinehurst, N. C., and Southern Pines, equally at this time a large number of New England residents avoid the rigors of winter by going to one of these two famous resorts. The new arrangement will provide the best service the Seaboard Air Line Railway has had in a number of years.

The new train to Pinehurst will leave New York at 3:40 p. m. and Washington at 8:35 p. m. daily, carrying sleepers from each point to Pinehurst. In connection with the Colonial Express this provides practically through service to this resort. The arrival in Pinehurst will be at 9:30 a. m. It has been arranged to have a diner carried on this train so that it will be possible to have breakfast en route.

"DUDE" RANCHES WELL BOOKED.

Reports indicating that some of the better "dude" ranches in Sheridan county, Wyo., have been completely 60 per cent. of their available space for 1923 already booked, and that the same situation is true throughout the ranching section of the Cody Road indicates the growing popularity of an unusual kind of summer vacation which yearly attracts hundreds from New England.

These "dude" ranches are usually log structures where the effete Easterner may enjoy the sensation of roughing it with comfort. Horses and grub are provided from the ranch herds. Canoe and long trips, often of several days' duration, are taken on horseback. A number of well known Boston business and professional men who have experienced the pleasure of a vacation out where there's a twang in the air, make the pilgrimage yearly.

At the local office of the Burlington Route, in the Old South Building, those interested in planning an out-of-the-ordinary vacation, may obtain booklets descriptive of the various ranch resorts.

PROHIBITION SHAKEUP DUE NEW YEARS

Washington, Dec. 26.—Reorganization of the prohibition unit will begin on New Year's Day with appointments, dismissals and transfers in the dry force throughout the United States, it was said at Commissioner Haynes' office today.

For more effective campaigning against the drug traffic numerous agents may be transferred to the narcotic division.

Several states where acting directors now function will be affected, either by appointments of directors from outside the present force or by promotion of present state heads. These states are Montana, Illinois, Wisconsin, Rhode Island, New York, Louisiana and New Jersey.

E. C. Yellowley, who took charge of prohibition enforcement in New York, where Ralph Day resigned on November 3, is expected to be named director for that state.

Incident with the changes in the ranks of the prohibition forces, police departments throughout the country will be advised on New Year's day of the altered relations between themselves and prohibition agents.

President Harding has sanctioned Commissioner Haynes' idea of letting the municipal and state police conduct raids and enforce the Volstead act in minor cases, leaving the federal agents free for work on a larger scale.

STOLEN GEMS RECOVERED IN BOSTON

The den of a Boston "fence," whose name is withheld by the Fitchburg police, has disgorged jewelry valued at $3,000.

The property, consisting of ten diamond rings, one hundred rings of lesser value, thirteen stickpins and fifteen necklaces, has been claimed by Charles J. Kaucpinen, a Fitchburg merchant, whose store was looted in a daring Christmas "break" by Warren McCann of Leominster, who the police say, has confessed.

McCann will be arraigned today, charged with the crime. He was picked up as a suspicious person by the police, acting upon information elicited from him, Inspector Flint journeyed to Boston and recovered the "swag."

GIRL SWOONS AT ADMIRER'S THREAT

Fitchburg, Dec. 26.—Sylvia Mattesson, eighteen and comely, was the centre of a group of admiring young men at City Hall. She danced and flirted. Came a swarthy youth who pushed to her side, whispered in her ear and strode away. Sylvia gave a little shriek and fainted.

Today Edward Santiapio, nineteen, faced Sylvia in district court to answer charges of threatening to kill her if she consequited was the motive, police say.

We Don't Want Mr. Ku Klux There—

We Don't Want Any Other Dictator There, Either

Copyright, 1922, Star Co.

A LITTLE KU-KLUX WITH TWO LESSONS ATTACHED.

This is part of a fine cartoon published in the New York American made by Winsor McCay. It shows little Mr. Ku Klux standing on top of the Miss Liberty pedestal in the harbor. Mr. Klux is trying to rule the coming and going of Americans. Sorting them over, so to speak.

The cartoon tells its own story. Miss Liberty, amused, looks down at the little creature and presently, undoubtedly, will use the weapon in her hand to give him the rebuke he needs.

HOWEVER, FELLOW CITIZENS, let us not concentrate attention exclusively on the Ku Klux Klan. OTHERS have tried to run the United States and are still trying to run it.

That Goddess of Liberty looks across the water every day toward Wall Street and sees gentlemen who believe, as sincerely as any Ku Klux Kleagle, that they have a right to rule this country, that THEY are superior and that others INFERIOR.

The Statue of Liberty looks down every day upon railroad terminals that represent sincere belief on the part of their owners that they OWN the lawmakers and that railroads should have special privileges and special superiority of their own.

The little Ku Klux gentleman is the sort that doesn't last long. For he frankly tells you what he is. He picks out for his enemies the Catholics and Jews, of which either can easily put an end to him.

There is nothing dangerous to republican government in a gentleman who puts on a white shirt with a fancy cross and says, "Here I am, boo!"

A more dangerous enemy than this little Ku Klux insect is the man that works "legally" through corporation officials, through political henchmen, through Legislatures that corporations own, through a Congress manipulated.

You can imagine the Statue of Liberty looking at the little creature at her foot and saying, "YOU are not the insect I am afraid of, you miserable little thing. We know where to find you whenever we WANT you. Those bigger, abler, more cunning, more hypocritical than you are the danger. THEY, not YOU, are dangerous to THE RULE OF LIBERTY in America."

Edison Company Methods

Just One Reason Why We Have to Pay More for Electric Lighting Than People in Other Cities

We are going to let the Boston Post write an editorial for us on the Edison Light Company extravagance. The Post calls it the "Edison Frost Charge." It is a little matter, but it is significant of the methods of our lighting company. Here is the editorial:

EDISON'S FROST CHARGE

The Edison Electric Company of Boston, when installing service wires into the homes of new customers whose houses are set well back from the street, and where the service wires are underground, finds it necessary to dig a trench on the private property in which to lay the wires. The cost of this digging naturally varies with the length of the trenches and the Winter time the cost is doubled because of the frozen ground.

With its usual spirit of fairness the Edison Company only charges the customer the actual cost to it of this digging and installation, and in fact, allows the customer to arrange for the digging to be done by anybody else, if he chooses. The average cost to the Edison Lighting Company a great deal more to buy its coal than it costs the public-operated Boston street railway, and the publicly-owned and operated Holyoke electric lighting plant.

customer, however, would naturally assume that a big, efficiently managed corporation could do this work, in which it is constantly engaged, at the minimum expense and no would let the company do the work.

But in a recent instance the customer thought the proposed charge high. The company said it would cost $20 plus $20 additional at this season of the year because of the frost. In a word the total cost was to be $40 for digging the trench. The customer engaged a laborer to do the work for $3 and it was done in three hours.

Now the company claimed this $40 charge was the actual cost to it of doing work which really only cost $3 and we may fairly take its word for it.

It costs the Edison Lighting Company a great deal more to buy its coal than it costs the public-operated Boston street railway, and the publicly-owned and operated Holyoke electric lighting plant.

A New Fighting Department

Not Land or Water—but AIR

Copyright, 1922, Star Co.

An official commission urges President Harding to unite the army and navy in one single department under one head. A natural, wise suggestion, for from now on there will be no such thing as land war and war on the water. It will all be WAR IN THE AIR. Troops will be shelled and gassed from the air, and from the air battleships will be sunk.

Instead of Secretary of War or Navy it ought to be the "Air Defence Secretary." And government should realize that the battleship is as much out of date as the hansom cab and take air defence seriously.

ARE WE EVER GOING TO GROW UP?

By Bruno Lessirg

WHEN I think of the things that interest the great bulk of humanity, viz:

A scandal, a mysterious crime, a multi-millionaire, a new fashion, a silly book, the doings of actors and actresses and a great sporting event. I often wonder:

Whether this is not a childish world that we live in. And the next thought that comes is: Are we ever going to grow up?

I guess the world is still a mere kid. A couple of thousand years ago there were some intellectual giants, like Aristotle, Homer, Horace, Virgil and Aeschylus, who uttered words of wonderful beauty and wisdom. For all the effect these words had upon mankind, they might as well have been shouted upon the air of the Sahara desert. True, a few ears heard them, a few minds preserved them and a few souls, today, derive knowledge, satisfaction and even joy from them.

The older I get, the more I enjoy feeling young. No sane being ever gets tired of having a good time. There is only one thing that I know more wearisome than constantly poring over books and gazing at beautiful pictures and indulging in the pastime of learning and thinking. And that is to constantly jazz and loaf and try to feed the imagination upon an empty mind.

I don't want to be a kill-joy. Enjoy yourself to your heart's content. But be serious, once in a while, and try to act and think like a grown-up. And when you do, remember that money-making is of infinitely less value and importance than mind-building.

WESTERN ROADS' SCENIC GLORY

RENO, Dec. 26.—A location survey for the proposed new highway from Summit to the head of Donner lake has just been completed by the California Highway Commission.

The present route will be shortened half a mile, and the grade will be reduced to 7 per cent. In addition to affording a more scenic route, the new road will be open, it is estimated, forty-five days longer in the Spring, owing to southern exposure.

Tax on Coal

Editor Boston American:

The highest court in the land has declared as legal the tax imposed by the State of Pennsylvania of two dollars a ton on hard coal. This has placed an extra burden on the shoulders of the users of hard coal. Having been upheld by the Supreme Court, what assurance have the hard coal users that the end has been reached? If lawful to tax such such a commodity as coal two dollars a ton, why stop there? Why not make it ten dollars? Why not make the hard coal users outside the State of Pennsylvania pay the Pennsylvania State budget? The comparison between the said State budget and the two-dollar tax would make interesting reading. There would be nothing to prevent the cotton raising States taxing cotton five cents a pound on interstate trade. Such being the case, anyone can see what would speedily happen in our cotton centres of Fall River, New Bedford and Lowell. This clearly shows that there must be an amendment to our Constitution to plug such a terrible hole that has been lying undiscovered these many years. The natural resources of any one section must be available to the whole country, tax free, or we cease to be a United States, and become a group of individual States. Government ownership of the coal mines and railroads would take temptation away from the State of Pennsylvania, so let's have them both—an amendment to the Constitution, and government ownership.

CHARLES L. BECKER.

Irish Free State

Editor Boston American:

I wish to answer Francis X. O'Connor. Mr. O'Connor, in his article, said Ireland had taken a rightful place among the nations of the earth. Balderdash. Ireland has not got an Irish government at all, only two English subordinate governments for two parts of a divided Ireland. Ireland does not want a republic, he writes. Strange that they who shout for a republic in one land bliss at it in another.

We fought the war to make the world safe for Democracy, not to make the world safe for England. We went forth to free India, Egypt and Ireland as well as Belgium, Serbia and Montenegro. We must write the epitaph on the statue of Robert Emmet.

ADAM AND EVE DESCRIBED

LONDON, Dec. 26.—When some hundreds of cards written in an ancient language by a London woman have been interpreted we shall know just what happened in the Garden of Eden.

This is the hope held out by Mrs. Gill of Thorngrove road, Upton Park.

For some years, she says, she has been visited continually by the spirit of an Oriental who lived thousands of years ago, and he inspires her not only to speak but to write in several dead languages.

SEEN AND HEARD

Boston is the mother city of many forms of artistic expression, and perhaps the newest is the pencil drawing by MISS ANNA M. HATHAWAY. Her exhibition at a Park street showing includes sketches of Plymouth, Marblehead, Ipswich and Rockport, in phases of natural beauty as well as of historic interest.

North Weymouth garage manufacturers are performing a timely charity in the midst of fuel shortage by permitting any needy householder for a nominal charge of a dime to take away all the wood he or she can carry at one time.

Perhaps the most admired animals at the Franklin Park Zoo, of which DR. P. J. CRONIN is now acting head, are in the herd of elk presented the city by Boston Lodge of Elks. They enjoy the cold weather immensely, and in a few weeks will be shedding their antlers for the new annual growth.

When the armistice was signed, CONGRESSMAN JOHN J. ROGERS of Lowell, who tells this one on himself, was a private in a Western camp. "Answer 'yes,' if you wish immediate discharge," said his captain as he called the roll. "No,' if you don't." He came to ROGERS, who replied, "no," then realizing his mistake, shouted "yes!" The captain appraised him critically and said: "ROGERS, just because you're in Congress don't think you have to vote on both sides of every question."

JOHN REED and DICK McCOY of the chief clerk's office of the railway mail service ran up against a snag on the alleys last week. Both thought they were "All America" calibre bowlers until MISS MARIE GOODE and MISS HELEN LALLY, fellow-employes, outrolled them.

Male voters in Newton now exceed the females by a little over a thousand. Local "polls" are now scouring around trying to get all the men to register, fearing that a few years will see the balance of power in the hands of the newly enfranchised women.

SUPERINTENDENT W. P. YARRINGTON of the Railway Mail Service in Boston today is being congratulated for the way his department handled an unusually aggravated situation this year. Despite many obstacles, the plan was worked out in such a manner that the greater part of his force was able to have the holiday at home without delaying the mail in any degree.

GARRETT P. SERVISS ON BINARY STARS

By Garrett P. Serviss

NO more wonderful objects have been discovered in the heavens by modern applications of photography joined to the telescope and the spectroscope than the "spectroscopic" and "eclipsing" binary stars.

These are suns linked so close together by their mutual gravitating that they revolve around one another in orbits so small that the two bodies in some cases are almost in contact, while occasionally they eclipse one another during a part of the brief period of revolution.

Even when they are as far apart as they can go, as viewed from our point of space, they are not separately visible, and the fact that they consist of two stars apparently blended into one is only revealed by the periodical shifting and sometimes by doubling of their spectral lines and by significant changes in their total brightness.

The eclipses can only occur in cases where the plane in which the two stars whirl around their common centre of gravity happens to lie so nearly horizontal or parallel to our line of sight from the earth that when the two get radically about in line with the earth one of them more or less completely covers the other.

The celebrated star "Algol," the "Demon" of the Arabian stargazers, is an example of an eclipsing binary, or "eclipsing variable," another name for the same phenomenon, variability of brightness being a necessary consequence of the eclipses, and sometimes furnishing, as already remarked, the clue to the binary, or dual character of the object.

Although binary stars that do not exhibit eclipses and are not so close together as to require the detective powers of the spectroscope to disclose their duplicity are not very rare, the other kind which we are dealing with has but few representatives in the sky, and every discovery of another one excites much attention among astronomers. Such a discovery is the subject of the latest circular of the Harvard Observatory, No. 238.

It is a southern star, in the constellation Sagittarius, more than 26 degrees south of the celestial equator. It is also, as reckoned by human sight, a faint star, far below the limit of naked-eye vision. But the largest parallax estimated for it is 0.002 of a second of arc, which corresponds with a distance of about 9,600 trillions of miles, or more than a hundred million times the distance of the sun. Remembering that the intensity of light diminishes inversely as the square of the distance, it is easy to show that the sun would be much fainter than the little star in question if placed as far away.

Ida E. Woods and Martha B. Shapley, who discovered this remarkable fact by aid of the Harvard photographic plates of southern stars, find that it changes in brightness from one to three magnitudes every eight days. A difference of three magnitudes corresponds to a brightness ratio of about 16 to 1.

Significant Incidents in Lives of Famous Women

How Jane Austen Became a Great Novelist

She Wrote of the Doings of the Town.

IN the magnificent cathedral in the city of Winchester, England, are buried many distinguished persons. Here lie some of the early Saxon kings, and there is a possibility that the great King Alfred was buried there.

Among the famous personages buried there is St. Swithin, whose name has come down to us and is recalled every July. Izaak Walton by his writing fame is one of the representatives of literature whose tombs are in this glorious old cathedral.

But perhaps no tomb attracts more attention than one that is marked by a plain slab of marble. On it is a simple name, "Jane Austen," that of a simple woman, who wrote of simple things, but with such a masterful hand and in such an engaging way that she became one of the most illustrious women of English literature.

Jane Austen, the author of "Persuasion," "Pride and Prejudice," "Sense and Sensibility," and other novels, was born in 1775, near London. Her father was a clergyman of the church of England, stationed in the small town of Steventon.

Jane was brought up and lived in the narrow circle of this small place, in the most monotonous and strictest fashion.

But she managed by her imagination and her gift of writing to find so much interest in the life around her that she made her life in this quiet country town one of absorbing interest. Perhaps you will get some idea of those who were her neighbors when I say that they were not even interested in the American Revolution, or moved by the horors of the French Revolution. Both of these upheavals took place during Jane Austen's life.

But she wrote of no world events. She wrote of the doings of the town.

Her first manuscript lay for eleven years before she made any attempt to publish it. She would have been the fashion in London as the great woman writer of her day. The King, George IV., invited her to dedicate one of her novels to him.

But this simple woman declined what we would now call "publicity," and lived her quiet, uneventful life for only forty-two years. She started to write when a girl in her teens, but before her pen was laid down for the last time she had given to English literature some of its best-loved books.
